“A great soul will be strong to live as well as to think.”

Some Impressions of European Schools

BY J. ASBURY PITMAN

The following impressions are based upon observations in a large number of schools in ten different countries, during a period of six months ending in December, 1932. The list of institutions visited includes a wide range from the nursery school and kindergarten through the university, although particular attention was given to a study of teacher training and of progressive schools. There was also ample opportunity to observe various kinds of public and private schools, both elementary and secondary, and work in many specialized fields, particularly in commercial and other forms of vocational education.

An American engaged in the professional training of teachers is immediately impressed by numerous evidences of age and tradition. In general, a large proportion of the school buildings in the countries visited are relatively old—some of them centuries old—and provided with furnishings and equipment which are altogether inferior to those found in the average American school. For example, single adjustable chairs and desks were found in only two of all the buildings inspected. Of course there are notable exceptions to this generalization in certain countries and in several of the cities in other countries.

With the exception of real progressive schools and school systems, the attitude toward discipline is distinctly traditional and in many instances it reflects the spirit of militarism. This is particularly true in numerous schools in which even little children are taught by rehabilitated war veterans, who often have had no professional preparation.

The almost universal separation of the sexes, from the nursery school through the university, is another expression of mediaeval influences which have been perpetuated through the centuries, although very often boys and girls in the public schools receive their education under the same roof but not in the same classes.

Always with the exception of the progressive schools, the curriculum itself is much more traditional than in America. In the secondary schools, the time-honored classical subjects are everywhere in evidence; general courses are discredited; and there are few comprehensive high schools in which vocational subjects are taught. This work is usually left to highly specialized schools, many of which are rendering conspicuous service. For example, there are the vocational schools in Munich, founded by Dr. George Kirchensteiner, and similar schools in Vienna. Advanced commercial education receives more attention in most European countries than in America. Apparently the secondary schools are not doing as good work in this field as our own, but the higher commercial schools are conspicuous both in the number and in the quality of their work.

In Italy, Austria, and Germany, in particular, art and music are much more prominent in the curriculum of the elementary and the secondary school, and of course in the professional schools for teachers, than in America. Not only are teachers trained in these subjects, but also artists and musicians. In the Pedagogical Seminary in Kiel, Germany, which is an institution no larger than our own, included in the equipment are eight church organs, large and small, and twenty-eight studios each of which contains a piano. The training of musicians, particularly church organists, is a specialized line of work in this school.

With the exception of these vocational schools, the methods employed in many of the public schools can hardly be regarded as modern. Text-book work and the question and answer method are much in evidence, even in schools taught by graduates of professional schools for teachers.

Very generally educational institutions have a much smaller membership than in American. This is true of even the large universities in England, Scotland, and in some of the countries of continental Europe, although some of the universities in Austria and Germany are striking exceptions to this rule. Oxford University comprises twenty-seven distinct colleges while Cambridge has seventeen. Many of the colleges in these two universities have a membership of not more than two hundred or three hundred and none has more than five hundred or six hundred students enrolled. The departments of education in most universities, even the largest, usually contain less than one thousand students and in a majority of cases there are not more than two hundred students enrolled. What is true of the size of university departments of education, with few exceptions, is equally true of normal schools and teachers colleges. The largest, among all of those visited, is the Jordan Hill Training College connected with the University of Glasgow, which has a membership of less than one thousand students.

The distinct advantage of small groups of students with the resulting close personal relationship with the faculty was apparent everywhere. It should be said that in this college and in the Pedagogical Seminary at Kiel, which is nearly as large, the work compares favorably with the best to be found in America.

Both in the British Isles and on the Continent, particularly in the secondary schools, the teachers are graduates of universities, with bachelors' degrees which may be earned in three years, who have been trained for their profession in a single year of intensive work either in a university school of education or a teachers college. Here they are taught largely by the lecture method and they are also given an opportunity for a limited amount of observation and practice often with little close or constructive supervision.

In many of the countries visited, provision is made for professional courses of two years only but frequently definite preparatory work has its beginning in the ninth year of school and is continued increasingly through the secondary school course. However, in the most progressive countries, systematic courses of three and four years above the level of the secondary school have been thoroughly established. In institutions maintaining courses four years in length, students are apparently much better prepared for teaching, even in the secondary school, than if they are graduates of the university and post graduates of a single year in a professional school.

In most of these professional schools there is comparatively little work in specialized fields. It seems to be the current belief that a teacher of the commercial subjects is best prepared if he is a graduate of a university, with a limited amount of technical training in a private commercial school and with a background of business experience. Similarly in other vocational schools, teachers are usually chosen because they have been successful apprentices in their respective fields of work and have had a considerable amount of experience. The assumption seems to be that there is no need of professional training if one, in any way, has acquired a knowledge of subject matter and some measure of technique, through experience.

In comparatively recent years, numerous progressive schools have sprung up because of a strong reaction from the old, traditional system of education. Among the schools of this type visited were the Montessori School in Rome, the Decroly School in Brussels, the International School and the Rousseau Institute at Geneva, Bedales at Petersfield, England, and a system of seventeen progressive schools, recently organized under the supervision of the government, within the school system in Prague. These progressive schools represent extreme types ranging from those that allow almost absolute individual freedom and with little attempt to secure continuity of work to schools which strongly encourage the exercise of individual initiative but which have a very definite and progressive plan and purpose.

It is interesting to note that in many of these progressive schools modern American methods have been appropriated, sometimes long after they have gone out of general use here, and applied and perfected in such a way as to raise the general level of educational method in the schools in which they are employed. The Dalton plan is in quite general use in progressive schools, and the socialized recitation and the project method of teaching are often found. In the city normal school in Brussels A Normal School Reader written by the Director is used as a basic text. In parallel columns printed in French and in English, American methods and educational movements are described at length and are employed in practice in both the Normal School and the Training School.

With the exception of the International School and the Rousseau Institute at Geneva and isolated schools here and there which reflect the individual teacher's attitude, there was no evidence of systematic courses of instruction calculated to promote a better international understanding. A system of the exchange of teachers of the social studies is unlikely to become an important factor in promoting international good will, because of language barriers. This failure to utilize the educational system as a means of promoting peace among the nations was a great disappointment.

A student of European schools is likely to return with the fixed impression that in most European countries thoroughness is often achieved at the expense of interest and that indoctrination discourages the development of the power of thought; but he is made aware that in America interest and creative power are too often developed at the expense of real culture and of thoroughness in education.

The New Road

There is infinite room for improvement in the panic-ridden civilization of 1933, but must the whole cosmos be shattered to bits in order to begin? Long ago, Omar Khayyam felt and expressed the need for change, in words known to all who read English literature. Life was complex in the days when he said,

"Ah, Love! Could Thou and I with Fate conspire
To grasp this sorry Scheme of Things entire,
Would we not shatter it to bits — and then
Re-mould it nearer to the Heart's Desire!"

1933 presents a panorama of vastly increased breadth. We behold economic struggles in Russia, social uprootings in Germany, increase of governmental experimentation everywhere. Should we seize them "entire" and revert to chaos? This is what some people desire.

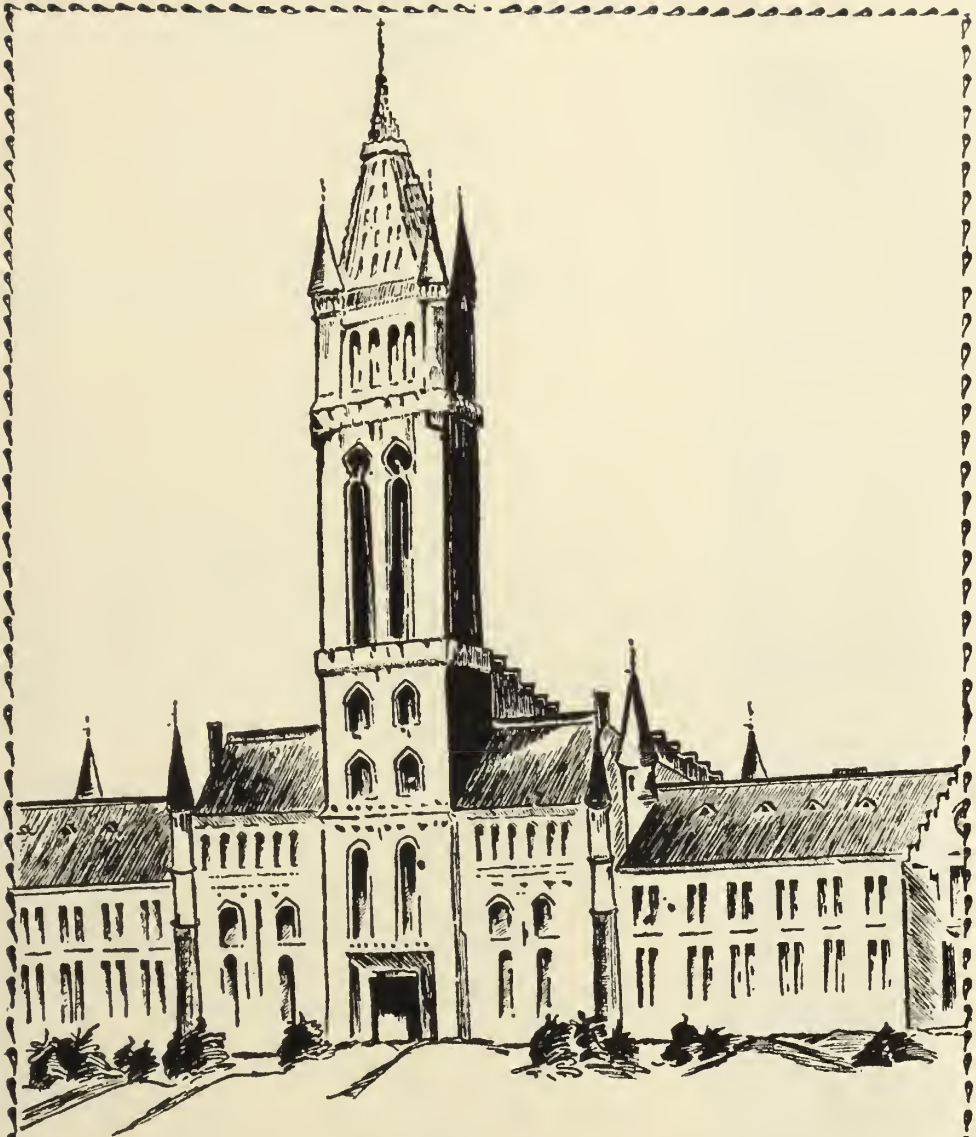

The need for rebuilding is greater than ever, but only half-understanding souls, with whom the writer has little sympathy, would wish to discard the values of the past. Upon the framework which we have, we should build further toward the sun of that much-heralded New Day of better understanding, sincerity, and toleration of true progress. With the aid of such lighthouses we may approach the Heart's Desire of international harmony.

Pope was wrong when he said, "Whatever is, is right." In that smug philosophic soil of the eighteenth century were sown the dragon's teeth which have sprung to dreadful maturity in our own day. We must pursue the middle way between the extremes of Omar and Pope. We must be courageous enough to face and to overcome the things which are wrong; courageous enough to break away from the old which is outworn, clinging to that which is of value; courageous enough to cherish freedom of thought; courageous enough to prevent destruction (under the guise of "improvement") of the foundations upon which a true civilization rests.

We must build on the experience of the past in order to make a new world. Seemingly, we are moving toward one of the two ends, that of international fear or that of international sympathy. The first is debilitating, annihilating; the second is invigorating, soothing to a blistering world, burnt now on all sides.

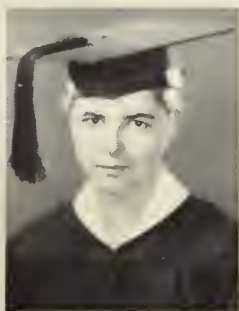

A magnificent chance is ours—to direct our efforts and those of our successors into the way of true progress; to remould, without "shattering to bits"; to live, to teach so that the present fervent desires of the few may become the realization of all in an educated, light-infiltrated world.

LYMAN E. BUTLER

As the YEAR BOOK goes to press we are glad to hear that Lyman is now recovering from his serious attack of infantile paralysis, with which he has been afflicted since last September. We have missed an active member of our class, one ready and eager to participate in all our undertakings, both in and out of school. We are all wishing you the best of luck, Ly! We know that you will soon be back, and your old self again.

MISS ELEANOR KASS arrived today to correct the final examination papers at the University of B. She has done this work for the past ten years and thus far no one has succeeded in graduating from the school.

MISS BEATRICE MAMBER recently attended the National Convention of Newspaper Editors, held in Kalamazoo, Michigan. Her paper was awarded first prize for its excellent tabloid section. Her ability was first displayed lavishly at her Alma Mater, S.T.C.

A lecture was given at Salem State Teachers College today by MISS MIRIAM DILLON, a graduate of that institution in 1933. The lecture was made possible by the Dodd Fund. Miss Dillon told of her trip to California in 1931.

TOWN NEWS

Orange, Massachusetts

A girl has recently been born to Mr. and Mrs. Leopold Cleone. Mrs. Cleone is the former Miss MARGARET GATES, a graduate of S.T.C. This is her seventh child, and will be named Albertina Leopoldia. Mr. and Mrs. Cleone are to be congratulated in that all their children are gifted musically. It is hoped that the new baby will be an athlete, since the other children show no ability in this direction.

Quincy, Massachusetts

MISS LOUISE McLAUGHLIN is spending the week at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin of Quincy. The city is honored by her visit. After only ten years of research, she has invented a First Aid Kit containing the new concentrated salve, iodine and mercurochrome, bandage, adhesive tape, splints, and scissors. These are to be sold in Quincy before they are distributed for sale throughout the United States.

Class Will

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF THE COMMERCIAL SENIOR CLASS:

After surviving four years of storm and stress during which time our endeavors have at last enabled us to reach the pinnacle of venerable seniority, We, the Commercial Seniors of the Salem Teachers College, being in a state of solemnity due to the impending term of training and sound in health due to our strenuous activities both mental and physical, do declare this to be our last will and testament and do bequeath the following:

To our faculty:

1. Dr. Pitman—our profound respect and deepest appreciation for his informal talks in many of our classes.
2. Mr. Sproul—our gracious thanks for a most cultural and extensive course of study combined in one period; also three full (?) front rows in chapel every morning.
3. Miss Badger—typewriters of one standard make so that notebooks from the seniors will not be necessary.
4. Miss Cruttenden—an infallible system for checking the use of her books so that their uncanny disappearances will be reduced.
5. Mr. Doner—the rare privilege of exhibiting our masterpieces done in Old English.
6. Miss Edwards—bigger, better, and cleaner board space for her use in teaching shorthand methods to the seniors.
7. Miss Gourville—a portfolio of excuses for avoiding showers after gym classes.
8. Miss Harris—window shades that will automatically adjust themselves with the path of the sun.

9. Mr. Phillips—an outline of ultra-modern projects for use in Junior Business Training.
10. Miss Roberts—the regulation of our heating system so that it will not compete with the seniors during a Parliamentary Law class.

FROM OUR CLASSMATES:

Ruth Arthur leaves her guileless expression (to be used only in class). She also leaves her ability as an efficient salesgirl to the freshmen for their future work.

Rose Boyjian, because of her modest nature, will leave only her ability as an entertainer; this aforesaid ability to be used in all future productions.

Alice Cadigan bequeaths her unfailing repartee and ready wit to any under classman who claims Springfield as her home town.

Lillian Caldwell will confer her keen sense of humor to anyone who can prove his ability to get by with as little work as she did at S. T. C.

Beatrice Christopherson bequeaths her poise and demureness, and the efficient manner which she possesses for filling offices.

Alice Despotopulos leaves a calm, even disposition to a person capable of memorizing to the same extent as can Alice.

Miriam Dillon leaves her worthy attributes of efficiency, loyalty, and capability to a successor, if one can be found.

Mildred Donnellan will impart her secret formula (for squeezing dimes from her classmates) to the government, in return for a teaching position in Medford.

Dorothy Freeman will gratefully leave her copious notes in sociology to the person who will lend her an "unloseable" pencil.

Margaret Gates abdicates as queen of sports to any girl who can cover the gym territory as quickly as she. Also—to any teacher, a proof that she and Miss Gray are not each other.

Beatrice Gray bequeaths her spontaneous enthusiasm, flashing smile, and sparkling wit to the one who can adapt herself to our classroom chairs comfortably, as she has done.

Gertrude Hansen will be glad to confer her histrionic ability upon the student who can cause as many inflections in her voice as Gert does. To Gert's talents may we add the power to convince any judge that her law is law.

Elsa Henchel would rather not leave her accomplishment of wearing out gym clothes by falling on the ball. She would, however, generously bequeath her infectious laughter and unfailing good nature.

Genevieve Hillman leaves a number of things—"school-girl complexion," a model giggle, her "cursory remarks, occasional sophistication, etc." Step right up juniors; take your pick, but take it carefully.

Charles Kaner would like to bequeath his honorary title of the "Only Man in the Commercial Senior Class," but being very considerate, will take the appellation with him. However, he does willingly leave his profound knowledge of accounting and financial matters.

Eleanor Kass will impart her cultural background, but with the restriction that it be given to a person worthy of being enlightened.

Louise McLaughlin leaves a first-aid kit for use in gym classes, also a conscientious spirit which we hope the underclassmen will acquire by the time they become seniors.

Beatrice Mamber, "the mighty atom," bequeaths her managerial ability for making successful Logs, parties, etc. Also her subtle manner of announcing her presence.

Camille Riley, running close second to Bea as the "mighty atom," endows us with her booklet, "How I Got My Schoolgirl Complexion." Testimonials on our candy counter will also be gladly given to those students who understand Parliamentary Law as well as she.

Eleanor Sargent, our encyclopedia of current mischief, cannot leave this knowledge as its utility diminishes with age. She will leave her knowledge of business practice.

Mildred Slobodokin imparts to the Juniors her stock of original, unanswerable questions in sociology. Many is the time she saved the day with her ingenious conundrum, for which we offer thanks. Mildred would like to leave her individuality, but it cannot be endowed—"true individuality cannot be copied."

Marion Simpson regrets that she cannot impart some of her versatility and wisdom, but she will generously suggest her secret process for the development of the cerebellum with regard to its fecundity as a storehouse of original projects.

Evelyn Tourville leaves with the hope that longer and more frequent vacations will be given for students who have "outside" interests. She also bequeaths her skill in shorthand and typewriting to incoming freshmen.

TO THE COMMERCIAL JUNIOR CLASSMEN:

The precedent which we have set before them—our lofty ideals and high standards—and our wishes that they succeed as well as we have and with as little effort.

In testimony whereof, we hereunto set our hand and seal this 10th day of March in the Year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and thirty-three.

HELEN CURTIS

We recall Helen as a quiet, friendly classmate who always had a kind word for everybody. We regret deeply that she was so ill as to necessitate her withdrawal from college early in her senior year, and hope that she will soon be well again.

Elusive Happiness

People seem to be
 Snatching greedily,
 Snatching hungrily,
 At happiness—
 And missing it.

But still they all stray
 Seeking night and day,
 Seeking by the way,
 For happiness—
 Yet missing it.

If all their grasping,
 Such selfish seeking,
 Such selfish groping,
 Were unselfish—
 They would find it.

Steps along the Road

We have gained from our academic life a sense of responsibility for understanding world neighbors, because our college makes world concern an integral part of the lives of its students. A strong influence is generated by clubs and class groups, who have sponsored lectures by authorities on world affairs.

The work of the International Relations Club is typical of that done by others. The Club has been affiliated with similar organizations in prominent colleges, as a participant in model League of Nations assemblies, the one this year being held at Smith College. A dramatization of a League of Nations assembly, which discussed the Japanese situation, was given before a local woman's club. An honor came to our college in the naming of Thelma Wiley, president of the International Relations Club, as a speaker at the banquet given under the auspices of the branch association of the League of Nations Association, at the East India House, on May 18. Thus the influence of Salem Teachers College spreads beyond the campus.

Dr. Pitman, through intensely interesting talks, has interpreted for us the situation abroad. He has read from his journal, and has frequently lectured to faculty, student-body, and clubs. He has especially brought home to us an understanding of Mussolini's regime, from first-hand knowledge. The economic interdependence of nations was made further evident by a concrete illustration of the relations between the Czechoslovakian and New England shoe industries, the latter of such intense concern to residents of the North Shore.

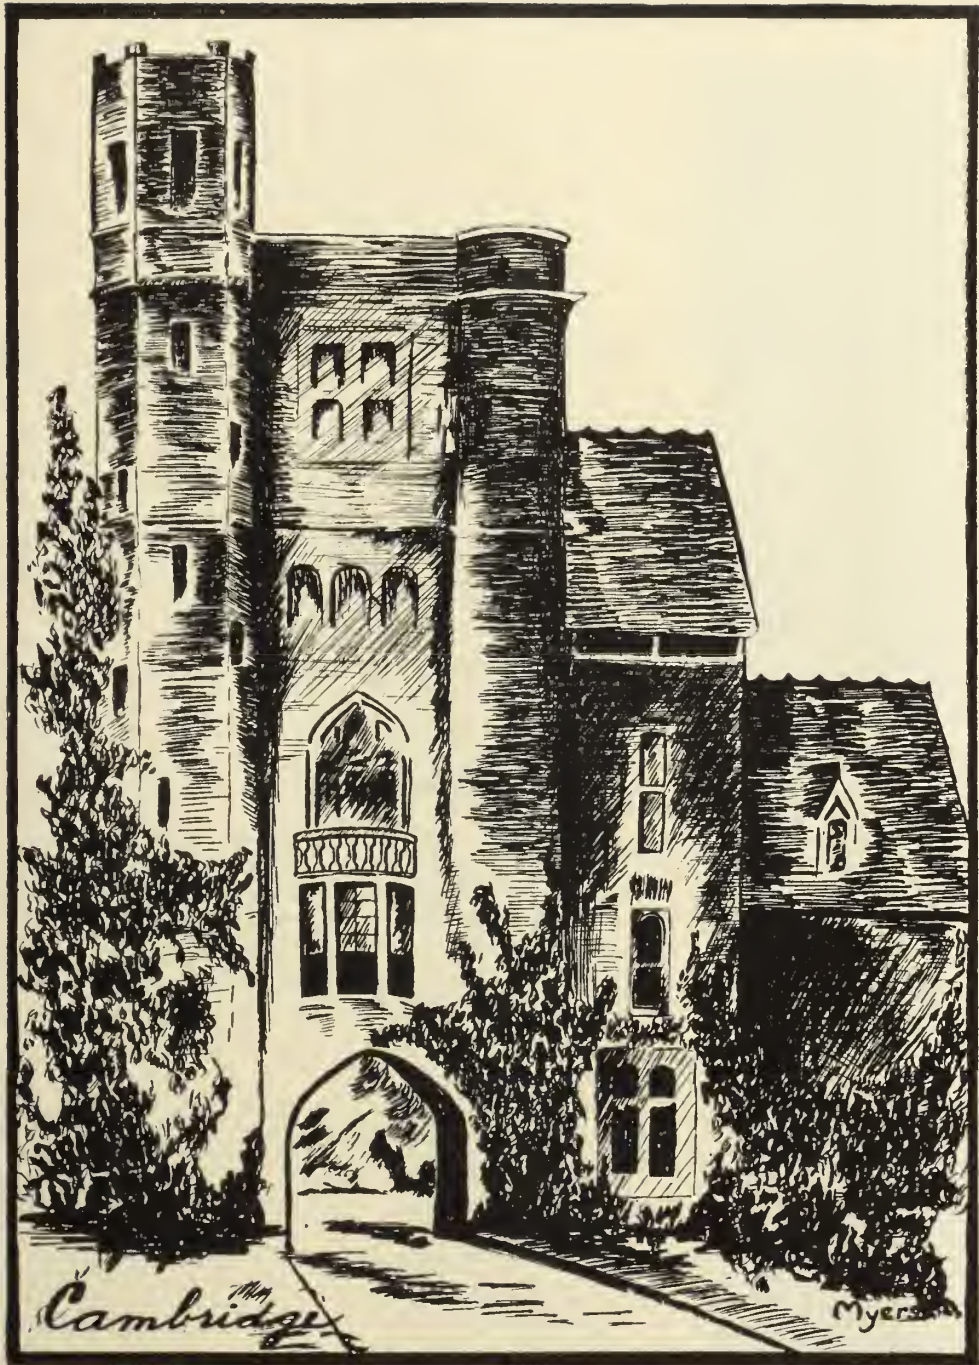

We felt a thrill of pride when Dr. Pitman told us that the name Salem Normal School—now Salem Teachers College—was prominently inscribed on the portals of the rebuilt library at Louvain, Belgium. President Pitman was a member of the Massachusetts state committee appointed to raise funds for such rebuilding, and the part our school has played in fostering friendly feeling was deeply appreciated. This was manifested by the warm welcome given to him by influential citizens of Belgium, at the Rotary Club in Brussels.

Through the efforts of the Student Council, chapel programs have been arranged as a world tour, so that an acquaintance has been made with the characteristics of peoples in our family of nations. The various classes have given sketches of Portugal, Spain, India, Italy, China, Ireland, Germany, and other countries.

Among the pioneers in the development of a feeling of international harmony is the Salem Training School, which tries to give the children, through the social studies, a rich background against which to interpret world events with increasing intelligence.

Our college has brought to us a recognition of the sharp necessity for international relations of an harmonious nature, and has given us helpful principles and modes of cultivating such relations. We must do as much for our students in a spirit of noblesse oblige.

Lois Pethybridge

Because of illness, Lois left the elementary class during her sophomore year. Although she is no longer with us, we still feel her presence and hear her merry laugh. We all wish her a speedy recovery, and hope that we remain in her thoughts as she does in ours.

Emotional Release

There are pent-up thoughts within me.
They must find some release,
So I pour them out in melody,
Until those thoughts do cease.

What care I if emotion
Does run away with me.
It is my right, my privilege,
As far as I can see.

It serves me as an exit
For many, many a passion.
Intoxication?
Maybe—
But, oh, what satisfaction!

Understanding

I am a scarlet sunset over a gray marsh,
And plummy clouds low-lying in the blue;
I am the ring of pearl about the city's neck;
A tangle of bare branches against a winter sky—
And yet you do not know that I am these.

I am an east wind, briny-cool and sweet;
I am the foam and the spume at the cliff's feet.
I am the ray of light that searches the night's face;
I am the tingling blue of illimitable space—
And yet you do not know that I am these.

Elementary Senior Prophecy

"Good-morning, Madam. A demonstration of the Seez-all, Knowz-all Machine, patent pending, registered U. S. Patent Office. In this year of 1950 no home should be without one—just like a baby in the home. See what your neighbor is doing, hear what she is saying about you. The future of the country depends upon it!"

I told the agent to leave the machine on approval, while my family struggled with the book of directions in their spare time.

To operate the machine, we dialed to the first letter of the person's name as we knew her "when", "then", and "now". Information was immediately showered forth in a rain of confetti. The pieces were then to be put together just as we used to fit jig-saw puzzles during the craze of 1933, when we were college seniors.

That reminded me—Of course I wanted to see whether the prophecy of the Elementary Seniors of 1933 had come true. Lo! 99 $\frac{1}{10}$ $\frac{3}{10}$ % pure it was, with Anne Doran leading all the rest.

Anne, now completely the athlete, appeared as President of Smarter Academy, whose physical education department, under the direction of Anne Adleberg, has become the most renowned in the country.

The Bigger Parade of celebrities formed in rapid fashion.

Exotic plants and flowers, bearing the sign E. Cooper, Horticulturist.

Sophie Saberlinsky, director of an engineering project which will make Haverhill even more famous through added power from the Merrimack River.

Hazel Dullea in the famous screen version of "Coquette", with Millie Bissett directing and Yvonne Mongeau as head camera woman.

Jean Wilder, member of the Massachusetts Legislature, fighting hard for the passage of the Teachers' Unemployment Relief Bill.

Louise Kelly, wife of the young president of Bates College, still full of fun and taking people as she finds them. Louise has recently been elected to the new position of Dean of Men—by the students.

Pauline Brooks, stunning in the latest Paris creation, the leading society matron of Park Avenue.

Phil Buccelli in her physical culture school which Mary Silva attends daily with two of her children. Margaret Chase, principal, promising Mary a job if ever she stretches sufficiently to be distinguished from the kindergarten children.

Alice Blackwood, broadcasting her Black and Woody Orchestra over WNAC. The next program on the same station is the Gracie Allen and Tessie the Typist Company, featuring Ann Fleming and Eleanor Kane. The Purse-Convertible-Into-Trunk Company, features Florence Wilson, Evangelist, in a world-wide talk.

Rose Maybush at her recently-formed club, the "Sign of the Horse," Leisurly riding on horseback is once more in vogue.

Gaudet and Riley, attempting to reach the moon, Rena shooting the new rocket ship, and Eleanor guarding it from all interference.

Carolyn Parsons, featured in the Big Time Follies on Broadway, and Miriam Hill, starring in a musical comedy, also on the Great White Way.

Helen Gordon, proprietress of a smarte Shoppe on Broadway, designing gowns for Carolyn and Miriam and their companies, also the trousseaux for Mildred Johnson and Dot Gesner's double wedding to a Vanderbilt and a Saltonstall, respectively. Dot Lehman models for Helen's best creations.

Anna Gershaw, receiving the prize for the Most Noted and Worthy Journalist. Olga D'Ovideo, somewhat milder and more conventional in her journalistic writings, now well-known, and respected for her work.

Celia Feldman, married to a psychologist, teaching her own and Louise Fisher's children the art of making one's way through a mob.

Still inseparable, "Cappy" Castle, charming of voice and manner, and Peg Cunninghamham, striking in personality and individuality, drawing crowds from all over the country to hear "Cappy" speak and to see Peg teach model lessons.

Edith Manuel, the most famous artist of the century, and Alice Smith materially successful as a commercial artist.

Gilda Rossetti's four children (they attend Anita Daniels' private school), were heard as well as seen. Their toys bore the stamp of Dot Litchman's Doll Furniture Company. When the children finish at Anita's school, they will attend Phyllis McCormick's finishing school. Phyllis finds that Peg Lord's children, following in Peg's footsteps, are so sweet and gentle that they need no finishing-off.

Ruth Talbot and Doris Chick, well-known leaders of Beverly society, busy practicing the Progressive Rearing of Children on their group of four. "Chickie" still finds time to make the piano dance.

Frances McDonald, lover of geography, lecturing on her travels around the world.

Two famous local editors, Erma Dimlich and Frances Ross of Lawrence and Ipswich respectively, both adhering to the principle of journalism — making people think they get what they want.

Nellie Suldenski, friend and instructor to all who come to the Y. W. C. A.

Marian Pritchard, as lovely as ever, winning all her high school pupils.

Thelma Butler, at Boston Symphony Hall, being mobbed by her admiring public.

Kay Sutkus, buying rectangular lunch tables for use on the balcony over the gym.

Suzanne Revealon, the ideal literature teacher in Cambridge High School.

Eleanor Cameron, the most gracious mistress ever to adorn the White House.

Ronny Langan, traveling with her adoring husband and two children. As you might guess, Peg Moran, the greatest wit and comic writer of the day, is not far from Ronny.

Well, I saw all and more than I had bargained for, but the machine offered too much power. Dictators went out in 1933, after the reign of Hiccup the Horrible.

I flashed the "Standing Room Only" sign the next day, stood the machine on the front porch with a piece of honey cake and a glass of ginger ale to ease the salesman's disappointment, and sat down to write a treatise on the futility of prophecies.

Marguerite Moran
Senior Class Secretary

Peg's education is complete,
except for one slight flaw:
Her ambition is to know if she should borrow or withdraw.

Jean Wilder
Sophomore Class Treasurer

Since Jean meets difficulties
by employing concentration
Then she's the one to solve our unemployment situation.

Veronica Langan
Chairman Senior Nominating Committee

Ronny, if the same day brought your two choice stars to town,
Would you choose to laugh With Dressler or laugh At Joe E. Brown?

Catherine Castle
Sophomore and Senior
Class Representative

We asked her why she's always gay so pleased with life, so happy.
"I read, and read, then read some

Ruth Talbot
Senior Class Representative

Ruth says she dotes on camping and what goes with it too.
I wonder what that last clause means
I think it's vague, don't you?

Eleanor Riley
Freshman and Sophomore
Class Representative

The Encyclopedia Britannica holds much charm for El
She'd rather read it week-ends than dance or skate... Oh, well!

Rena Gaudet
Sophomore Class Representative

She's laughing laughing all day long from the gym up to the hall,
Her studies must agree with her
(for she says she loves them all!)

Margaret Chase
Freshman Class Representative

To always keep us going straight
we've Margaret, Maggie, Peggy Chase
With names in such variety - sure here's a girl who'll make first base.

Advanced Class History

PREFACE

It is impossible within the limits of a few pages to write with any fair degree of justice the fascinating history of the Advanced Class.

The purpose of the authors, who have seen active service in the area affected, has been to treat briefly, in an unbiased fashion, the true account of all actions, words, and deeds—noble or otherwise, of this illustrious group.

CHAPTER I

DISCOVERY AND EXPLORATION

It was indeed a happy day for the faculty at the State Teachers College in Salem, Massachusetts, when thirty students, who already had received diplomas from the college, returned to earn a degree. The teachers had long prayed for such an assemblage of geniuses, and the experiences which naturally followed such a realization made the year 1932-1933 a joyous one for all concerned. The students, although of different racial inheritance,—some being graduates of the elementary department and some of the junior high school department, became rapidly socialized. Three students saw fit to withdraw, leaving twenty-seven advanced scholars to pursue the strenuous course.

The first great exploration began with the descent of the students into the lowest locker rooms. At first the class intended to revolt at such a seeming injustice, but upon a careful analysis of the situation they realized the real purpose of their mission. They were to act as social leaders, mental stimuli, and spiritual guides for the freshmen.

Other important explorations of this first quarter of a century included many jaunts to the book store, and delvings into the private lives of Romans, Greeks, et cetera, whose names—like their own—will live in world literature.

These explorations strengthened their ties of friendship, domestically and internationally, and prepared them to enjoy their rapid social expansion.

CHAPTER II

SOCIAL EXPANSION

To make the importance of the Advanced Class clearer, it might be worth our while to compare it to a planet, the other classes being satellites, and Alma Mater the solar system. How often each satellite, desiring to coin the favor of the Advanced Class, sought its assistance and approval of its activities! The entire school was fourth-year conscious.

By Australian ballot the Advanced Class elected Margaret Boyle to the Coöpera-tive Council. This was only an indication of the part they were to play in world governmental affairs, for did not some of the students cast their first Presidential vote?

To the W. A. A., the Advanced Class and the Special Education Class sent Mary Williams as their representative. To Harvard and to Yale the Advanced Class alone supplied such fair athletes as Margie Lemaire, Ruth Manuel, Dottie Protzman, Helen Sheehan, Nelda Spediacci, and Mary Williams. With such delegates, no wonder the W. A. A. enjoyed a pleasant year! In the M. A. A., John Donovan controlled the financial interests as treasurer. John was very efficient since he had taken a course in economics.

As a party-goer, Lillian Ginsberg became socially established. She brought honor to the class when she captured first prize at the Salmagundi Party. Recognizing the fact that their social prominence would necessitate having their pictures in the society column, the class reluctantly submitted to the ordeal. Being a modest class they thought their finished pictures rather good, but their friends complained that no picture could do them justice—for how could a picture reveal the halo of holiness about their heads, the intellectual light of their eyes, and the depth of character and soul?

The degree debutantes and beaux graced the pops concert and proms of the school year in order that these affairs might be socially distinctive. Thus we see that the demand for their presence socially made it inconvenient for them to study, although they did so with astonishing success.

CHAPTER III

INDUSTRIAL CONDITIONS

Impressed and instilled with the idea that they were making history and establishing precedent, the Advanced Class blazed its way to the front scholastically.

It is with pleasure that the authors recall the success of the geographical units of study prepared by this outstanding group. The lesson plans marked an era of reformation in the teaching of geography.

Art collections—unique, artistic, and complete—made by the Advanced Class, without doubt stimulated and inculcated in the other classes the ideals of initiative, originality, and good workmanship. Among those whose collections were exquisite were Martha Stanley, Frances Carleton, Eleanor O'Donnell, Priscilla Peabody, and Diana LeLacheur.

The assembly program voted by the entire school as the best of the year was, of course, sponsored by the Advanced Class. This was the lecture of Mr. Norman Vaughan, who went with Byrd on his expedition to the Antarctic. It is interesting to note that Mr. Vaughn escorted Councilor Margie to lunch.

This period of industriousness produced many creative appreciations of literature, theses on socializing agencies, and historical essays. Katherine Carroll and William Foley contributed to the Log, and several members of the class worked on material for the YEAR BOOK—Frances Carleton, Margaret Boyle, Dorothy Protzman, Ida Poleschuck, and Mary Williams, Associate Editor.

This distinguished class were among the first not to separate work and play. They found their joy in working, as it were. On March 7, the class made an eventful trip with Miss Perry to study at the Art Museum in Boston. Three—Nelda, Ida, and Mary Wells—, unaccustomed to the cruel city crowds, were parted from the group. Their professionalized leading questions finally procured them sufficient information to wind their way back to their sympathetic force of friends.

Betty and Julie, comparing their cartoons of Bismark and Cavour to the work of the specialized art students, found consolation in the law of compensation.

The industrial spirit exemplified did much to establish the names of the members of the Class as advanced students of education.

CHAPTER IV

ERA OF ACHIEVEMENT

Marks never interested the Advanced Class—they were in search of knowledge (little though there was left for them to learn), and marks were superficial. However their A's completely baffled the other classes, who evidently were immune from learning.

Several of their athletic members achieved fame in the W. A. A. and received awards for their splendid work. The presentation took place at the popular W. A. A. banquet.

Social achievements have been touched upon elsewhere, but it is well to mention here that the first announced engagement was that of Irene Polansky.

This famous class was unique in its achievements. It was the first class of elementary and junior high students to be candidates for a degree; it left behind it a precedent worthy of imitation by future Degree students; it took with it the experiences and joyous memory of the best class at S. T. C.

FOUR FRESHMEN MURDERED—DASTARDLY DEED COMMITTED IN LOCKER ROOM

Four young and tender members of the freshman class were cruelly murdered this morning in the basement locker room. The bodies were found strung up to the rafters by sneaker laces. Two Fourth-Year students were arrested by Special Officers Houlihan and McCourt at the scene of one of the most brutal killings in the history of the college. When seized by the representatives of the law, the two criminals gave their names as Julia Hesperance Pierce and Katherine Amantha Sweeney. Both are well-known to the police under several aliases.

The story which the prisoners told to Ruth Manuel, star reporter for the Lynn Blab will appear in tomorrow's issue.

The criminals will be tried before Judge Edward Hiram Murphv.

HOW TO PSYCHOANALYZE YOURSELF

Again William Psyche Foley crashes through and saves his friends hundreds of dollars! Why go to a psychologist? Just fill out the questionnaire below and add the numbers. If your total is above or below 100 forget the whole thing.

1. How are your inhibitions?————
2. Are you O.K? ————
3. Do you obey that impulse?————
4. Do you foam at the mouth?————
5. Do you like crooners?————
- *6. Have you read down this far?————

*N.B. If Question 6 is answered in the affirmative, run, do not walk, to your nearest psychologist.

Getting up a newspaper is no picnic.
 If we print jokes, you'll say we're silly;
 If we don't, we are too serious.
 If we take something from other papers,
 We are too lazy to write.
 If we don't print suggestions,
 We don't show proper appreciation;
 If we do print them, it's filled with junk.
 Like as not someone will say we swiped this
 From an exchange.

We did.

BOOK OF THE WEEK

WEEK-END GIRL by Mary Williams

All the problems that the younger generation have to face have been woven by this talented young writer into a most absorbing novel. You may condemn the "week-end" girl, but you cannot deny the grandeur nor escape the challenge of such a poignant, sublime figure.

The steady motor sings a pleasant humdrum song;
 The earth below looks chastened, cleanly, green;
 The wind just blows care from your face 'fore long,
 And when you circle in and out of snow white clouds
 The misty whiteness seeps right in and makes you cool and strong.
 Trouble stays 'way down on earth, and leaves
 Your spirit with the plane to drift and soar along.
 You know, it kind of launders out one's soul to fly up there alone.

Campus View

From a third story window,
My gaze wanders out
Over the vivid blue of the ocean,
The lovely expanse of cloudless sky.
Below the windows the lilac bushes
Flaunt their freshly-opened blossoms,
Delicate lavender, deep violet, and white;
Their sweet heavy odor permeates the air, and seems
To soak into the building's very stone.
Everywhere is displayed the delicate green
Of Spring. The whole world basks in a glory of Pale amber sunlight, soft and warm.

Special Class Prophecy

I am a reporter; I cover odd assignments, quiz fascinating people, investigate unconventional situations—for only the unusual is news. Yesterday, an insatiable quest for the unusual took me to an institution for the feebleminded. At this institution Ford's mass production and time saving principles have been applied to education, resulting in efficiency par excellence. Here every text-book theory expounded by self-assured educators has been tested in the class-room, resulting often in a deflated author, or the birth of a new principle of education.

The most remarkable part of the institution, however, is its staff; for although there are 555 patients housed here, the staff members number only ten—the Special Class en masse that was graduated from the Salem Teachers College in 1933. These ten teachers were so used to working under time pressure while at college, that speed became habitual to them. Under Margaret Richardson's stern supervision, they have learned to sleep quickly, wear clothes with only zipper fastenings, eat concentrated food tablets, and write shorthand. Each individual on her staff is a specialist in his particular field.

Miss Callum does all the intelligence testing for the building; she spent her recent sabbatical year in the sandy part of Egypt where she made some remarkable excavations. The most prized of her Egyptian discoveries were a pair of wooden pill boxes containing some of Pharaoh's original headache tablets. For years the school has been searching for similar round boxes to be used in the weight differentiating set of the Binet Simon intelligence tests; the long search is now ended.

Chef Tivnan, a most diligent cooking student while at college, directs the culinary department of the institution. The Chef's menu always includes cocoa, dry toast, and three varieties of apple sauce—his old school day specialties. By a series of graftings done on apple trees growing near hot springs, he now grows baked apples, thus abetting Miss Richardson's efficiency program.

Miss Herwitz, in the geography department, is trying to disclose to the patients just how they can lay hands on the cocoa bean in order to choke its source and so force Chef Tivnan to serve some drink other than cocoa.

Monsieur Kennedy is the clever modiste for the institution. He is a strong booster for the pajama fad and uses his own blue prints for the patterns.

Miss Helen MacKinnon is the supervisor of the manual training department. Her class at present is making a set of padded foot stools for Monsieur Kennedy to kneel on while pinning up pajama hems.

Miss Florence MacKinnon nurses in the hospital ward; she feeds her patients yeast and more yeast, hoping against hope that their Mental Ages may rise a trifle.

Miss Conway, the gym instructor, gives dumb-bell drills every day. Her patients do a great deal of aesthetic dancing out of doors—gyrating gaily over field and brush even as their instructor was wont to do when a student.

La DiGiusto conducts the choral society of the school, teaching all the music by rote. She wears a tuning fork in her hair, and hums operas happily all the day.

Miss Corcoran has heart-to-heart talks with the lovelorn of the institution.

This institution staff is unique, since it is composed of an entire college class which is well fitted for special lines,—and so it's news! Watch for my write-up in tomorrow's Globe.

Special Class Will

VERY SPECIAL —LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT

OF THE

MOST SPECIAL—EDUCATION DEPARTMENT

STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE, SALEM, MASSACHUSETTS

County of Hoff } To any gullible human being who might be under the erroneous
State of Pitman } impression that we are not so special:

The Special Education Class of Nineteen Hundred Thirty-Three, being of a very sound body, and—up to now—mind, declare this to be their last will and testament.

Possessors of extremely generous dispositions, they—as a group—bequeath to their various professors the following permanent mementos:

1. To Dr. Pitman—innumerable charts, projects, reports, et cetera, to be used as shining examples to all incoming classes.

2. To Miss Smith—a Robot to carry the attendance book through the years.

3. To Miss Hoff—a new State Teachers College with all windows on the north side, elevators so that her classes will be on time, a twelve-and-a-half-hour day in order that her "Jacks-of-all-Trades" will have time for every activity, and last (but hardly least), a bus and driver to be used for all excursions into the backwoods to observe Special Class centers.

4. To Miss Walker—a dozen or more secretaries, stenographers, and plain-clothes men to keep her desk in its own inimitable manner, and to manipulate the floor loom.

5. To Miss Perry—a class containing at least five sets of Siamese twins to keep the three looms in constant use while the second section of twins is weaving, block-printing, or carrying on with the other numerous exigencies of Industrial Arts.

6. To Mr. Whitman—a gallon jug of iodine for burns, abrasions, and the like received by ensuing "Suffering Specials" while building a replica of the Eiffel Tower.

7. To Miss Gourville—more than two girls to a class having similar "gym" uniforms, and a pair of ear-muffs to guard her auricles from the war whoops emitted from all while she outplays the lot of us at basketball.

8. To Mr. Little—a group, so “mechanically minded” that it can assemble the Graf Zeppelin without even sneaking a glance at a blue print.
9. To Miss Adams—a Frigidaire, an electric iron, a crochet hook, needles, pins, thread, yarn, translated patterns, and clever females who can sew as well as Mr. Kennedy can do all things.
10. To Mr. Woods—a sound-proof cage in which to lock the Specials, so that they will not disturb Chorus with their basketry.
11. To Bertha—an Automaton whose specialty is chocolate cake and ice cream.
12. To “Mac”—a vacuum cleaner in remembrance of his “little rays of sunshine.”

AS INDIVIDUALS, THE SPECIALS BEQUEATH THE FOLLOWING:

1. Ada Callum leaves her ability to swallow the dictionary in one gulp to any underclassman capable of such digestion, also her athletic feet, and a green sedan, known to have run on its own power after being pushed from Salem to Lynn.
2. Irma DiGiusto will dispense with her graphic descriptions, high color, and patent for that game of games, “The Boiler Burst.”
3. Martha Herwitz leaves (hoping that it will be duly appreciated), her infectious giggle, prowess in athletic contests, and brilliant cosmetic appliance to anyone who thinks that she can use all three as well as she. Martha also leaves a project on chocolate, slightly frayed, but highly commendable.
4. Jack Tivnan, after much burning of midnight Mazdas, has agreed to part with his innate gift of preparing work two minutes before the bell, the apron he made in Domestic Arts, and that “once seen, never forgotten, tender-hued pocket-book.”
5. “Peg” Richardson bequeaths every one of her multiple graces; namely, doing two home lessons at one time, working twenty-four hours a day, perfect nonchalance, willingness to knock anyone out in gym, facility for sprinting all over the college in five minutes, “wealth of material” foreign to the rest of us, and the record of being a perennial council representative.
6. Helen MacKinnon leaves what remains of the Ford, her fallen arches, that queer little habit that is the bane of all the other “Specialites”’ existence, any moth-eaten braided borders apt to appear in darkened corners of S. T. C., and, as a parting shot, her famous jokes.
7. Florence MacKinnon confers on friends in the lower classes one hundred forty-nine excuses for being in the wrong place at the right time, that adaptability which permits her to lunch at 11.30 A. M., to pack twenty people in the “Liz”, and to drive ten miles without gas. She has also decided to return the weight of the world to Atlas, four years being sufficient for her weakened shoulders.
8. Harold Kennedy, because of excess knowledge of Manual Arts, will part with some of that brain matter of his in exchange for information concerning “the fudge,” his overworked typewriter, project lesson plans, and title of the “best little old rumble seat cowboy” we ever did see.

9. Mae Conway will relinquish to anyone worthy of maintaining it, her "poker-face," secondhand fountain pen which leaks only during exam periods, compelling alto voice which so helped chorus to sound tuneful, her quietness in that same chorus, and her record of perfect chapel attendance.

10. Natalie Corcoran finds that the depression leaves her stock much depleted, but will leave two particularly vivid smocks to be worn on all state occasions, her over-abundance of brain matter, reserve, and sunny disposition, in addition to the sweet soprano squeak to be matched with Mae's in a charming duo.

The entire class leave their most profound gratitude to Morgan, Hollingworth, and Terman in return for many agonizing hours.

Signed, this twenty-fourth hour of the thirty-first of May, 1933,

Witnesses:

"THE SPECIALS"

Reflection

The full moon that serenely rides
The star-studded velvet of the sky
On restless gossamer clouds
Lets fall a shimmering cascade of gold,
An iridescent path that lightly floats
The murky, blue-black sea.
As little waves near shore dimple and swell,
The gold on them comes and goes
Like the luring light of fireflies.
Out near the horizon,
A silhouetted boat glides smoothly, almost stealthily,
Across the narrow path of light,
Only to be covered again by darkness.

* * * * *

But it is quiet here—so quiet that
Memories of yesterday that should be forgotten
Find their way back by the light of the moon.

A New England Road

Over dew-besparkled grass,
Over clover in a mass,
Over daisies shy that sway,

At a gait most dignified,
Now she goes from side to side,
Forming a meand'ring way
Through which people later stray.

Little does the cow foresee
A New England road-to-be.
Paths, then wagon-ruts, appear;
Last of all, the road is here.

Coöperative Council

The Coöperative Council, consists of thirty-two representatives from the various clubs and classes, four officers, and three faculty advisers.

The blanket fee was successfully carried out in this, its first year. The W. A. A., M. A. A., and the Log profited greatly from their shares in the budget.

The Freshmen were formally received at a tea, during the first week in October; Dr. and Mrs. Pitman were welcomed home at a formal reception and dance.

This year Salem Teachers College was represented at the Eastern States Conference in New York by three delegates, one from each of the departments.

A parliamentary code was established and used at all meetings. The history of the Council was written, and it is hoped that additions will be made in the future.

The officers who have led Council activities this year are: President, Virginia Joyce; Vice President, Christine Richardson; Secretary, Edna Leavitt; Treasurer, William Nolan; Chairman of Social Committee, Dorothy Hooker, Chairman of Chapel Committee, Catherine Castle; Chairman of General Welfare Committee, Ruth Talbot; Faculty advisers; Miss Perry, Miss FitzHugh, Mr. Rockwell.

First Row: G. Hillman, M. Slobodkin, Mr. Phillips, Mr. Sproul, Faculty Advisers; A. Leahy, L. McLaughlin

Commercial Council

The Commercial Council, comprised of three representatives from each of the Commercial classes, functions for the benefit of the Commercial students under the supervision of the faculty advisers, Mr. Sproul and Mr. Phillips. The officers of the council are Chairman, Mildred Slobodkin; Accountant, John Fouhey; Secretary, Alice Leahy.

The council is divided into four committees: the Visual Education Committee which is compiling and cataloging film data for future reference; the Committee on Progressive Steps in Commercial Education which is continually scanning newspapers and periodicals for new ideas and information in the field of Commercial Education; the Committee on Commercial Department Programs whose duties consist of arranging and presenting programs to the commercial students and to all others interested; the Welfare Committee, constantly concerned with the social conditions among commercial students.

During the past year the council has provided educational films for commercial classes, and, with the Camera Club, has presented a variety of motion picture films.

The Commercial Club in its remodeled form is based upon sound educational ideals. These ideals and the spirit of service within the Commercial Department justify the existence of the club.

John Burroughs Club

The John Burroughs Club unites those who are interested in nature and aims to give them a deeper insight to its beauty. During the last year, the members enjoyed the spring flowers at Ropes Memorial Greenhouse, the display of birds at the Peabody Museum, and a delightful field trip and picnic in the hills of Danvers.

The entire club attended the annual meeting of the Northeastern Bird Banding Association and the New England Federation of Bird Clubs in Boston. At a later date the club visited the Museum of Natural History and the Arnold Arboretum.

The club sponsored a chapel program and a lecture open to the student body.

Social events were not neglected and happy hours were spent at the Acquaintance Party, Salmagundi Party, and Valentine Party.

Under the leadership of Miss Goldsmith, the club was organized with the following officers: President, Mary Shaughnessy; Vice President, Dorothy Hooker; Treasurer, Kathleen Scanlon; Secretary, Anne Cunningham; Executive Board, Lillian Terry and Lorraine Keith.

CAMERA CLUB

Third Row: A. Dillon, A. Callahan, M. Crowell, S. Revaleon, J. Donovan, Y. Mongeau, F. MacDonald, D. Litchman

First Row: M. Johnson, H. Conery, D. Blythe, F. Fink, M. Pritchard, C. Richardson, B. Stanley, S. Nelson

Camera Club

The Camera Club's greatest contribution to the school is a picture book showing the various activities, such as chapel programs, plays, and affairs of interest to all students. The club offers experience in the making of negatives, prints, enlargements, silhouettes, colored pictures, and novelties connected with photography.

Recently the club bought an enlarging machine with which it hopes to turn many of those small snapshots which you treasure into pictures for your home.

The Camera Club owes much of its success to the assistance and inspiration given by Mr. Whitman, faculty adviser.

The officers of the Camera Club for 1932-1933 are: President, Florence Fink; Vice President, Marian Pritchard; Secretary, Sylvia Myers; Treasurer, Doris Blythe.

GEOGRAPHY CLUB

Third Row: D. Daigle, L. Gagnon, E. Lamprey, B. Ryan, E. Maynard

Second Row: M. Dillon, V. Vaughan, K. Sweeney, T. Crowley, M. Lemaire, A. Cadigan

First Row: V. Poleschuck, Miss Flanders, Faculty Adviser; K. Carroll, Miss Ware, Faculty Adviser

Geography Club

At the beginning of the year, the Geography Club voted to study a number of countries, the most popular of which were Russia and India.

Since the group was most interested in Russia, eight meetings were devoted to that country. The characteristics of the people; their influence on Russian literature, art, and music; the Five Year Plan, and the resultant educational system of the U. S. S. R. were studied. A Russian Tea, replete with real Russian tea and facsimiles of Russian food, was successfully presented. Guest speakers, who gave first hand impressions of the U. S. S. R., were entertained.

During the latter part of the year, the club engaged itself with the problem of India. The relationship among economic, social, and religious forces in making India a problem nation was reviewed. To conclude its program, the club debated the question of Indian independence.

International Relations Club

This year the International Relations Club members have carried on discussions concerning current world problems and have studied the Lytton Report and the League Covenant. The club was assisted in its work by the fine library of books presented by the Carnegie Foundation. Some of the books pertinent to present world problems are: America, World Leader or Ied; Where the East Begins; Making of Bolsheviks.

Members of the club presented a Model Council meeting for the Thought and Work Club of Salem, with the Sino-Japanese situation for discussion.

Three members, Thelma Wiley, Barbara Doyle, V. Chudleigh, were sent to the Model League Assembly at Smith College in March.

The club arranged and presented the assembly program for Peace Day.

Mathematics Club

The Mathematics Club—newly organized this year—has identified itself as one of the school's most active clubs. The purposes of the club are:

1. To promote an interest in and a desire for mathematics,
2. To provide an opportunity for the enjoyment of mathematics.

The meetings and socials, including one open social meeting, have been cleverly carried out in a mathematical way. In each issue of the Log, a mathematical problem has been published; these problems have baffled not only club members but the faculty and student body as well. A jig-saw puzzle party was given by the club.

An interesting collection of old text-books, possibly pored over by our grandparents, was displayed in the arithmetic room.

The officers of the Mathematics Club are: President, Eleanor Wilson; Vice President, Dorothy Thompson; Treasurer, Linda Betts; Secretary, Augusta Pulsifer; Council Representative, Rebecca Patten.

This organization, which has progressed so rapidly under the able leadership of Miss Stone, expects to do still better and bigger things along the problematic and geometrical lines as it adds age to success.

GIRLS' GLEE CLUB

President, Marion Conway; Vice-President, Veronica Langan; Treasurer, Jean Wilder; Secretary, Irene Brooking; Librarian, Ruth Goldthwaite

Girls' Glee Club

The Girls' Glee Club welcomed its many new members at a "Get-Acquainted" party in October. Early in December, the club sponsored a Pops concert which was well-attended and universally enjoyed. The program included songs by the club and musical selections and novelties by guest artists. Refreshments and dancing were also attractions offered at the affair.

In May, members of the Girls' and Men's Glee Clubs presented the operetta, The Count and the Co-ed, which was third in the club's list of successful productions.

The Club held regular informal meetings and arranged short programs for various occasions.

The leaders of the Girls' Glee Club during the successful season of 1932-1933 were; President, Marion Conway; Vice President, Veronica Langan; Secretary, Irene Brooking; Treasurer, Jean Wilder; Librarian, Ruth Goldthwaite; Faculty Adviser and Conductor, C. Francis Woods.

TRIMU

Third Row: A. Rostkowska, E. Tourville, U. Whitmore, C. Marshall, R. Gaunt, G. Holt, R. Southwick, A. Despotopulos, H. Joyce, M. Gates, F. Paignon, E. Sargent
Second Row: T. Wiley, S. Myers, A. Partanen, C. Susco, H. Szydowski, L. Gagnon, P. Robinson, A. Pulsifer, D. Freeman, M. Steele, L. Donnell
First Row: V. Joyce, N. Suldenski, R. Izenstein, H. Stanwood, A. Dugan, E. Henchel, Miss Hoff, Faculty Adviser; S. Tolchinsky, M. Bohenko, B. Gray, M. Otto, L. McLaughlin

Trimu

Trimu is a club for the boarding students, and its main purpose is to create fellowship among them. This year the club has had an unusually large enrollment and has carried on its activities most successfully. The annual fall outing at which the Freshmen were welcomed and initiated was held at Preston Beach, Marblehead. This was the first social event of the season and a large crowd made the trip.

In addition to the regular business meetings a party has been held each month in the school. All the affairs were thoroughly enjoyed by the members and included a bridge party, a baby party, a motion picture and other forms of entertainment.

As is customary, the club sold S. T. C. Christmas cards during the holiday season.

The officers of the Trimu club are: Miss Hoff, Faculty Adviser; Elsa Henchel, President; Alice Dugan, Secretary; Lorinda Folsom, Treasurer.

GIRL SCOUT CLUB

Third Row: P. Robinson, P. Buccelli, J. Ready, R. Whitney, E. Murray, M. Webb, E. Hanson, E. Leavitt, M. Cunningham, A. O'Loughlin
Second Row: M. Parker, M. Kadis, V. Borys, C. Gately, E. Oliver, M. Welch, M. Wheeler, F. List, D. Littlehale, J. Moakley
First Row: H. Brown, R. Southwick, M. Cann, L. Rand, E. Cooper, Miss Bunton. Faculty Adviser: B. Edmondson, A. Dugan, A. Pelletier

Girl Scout Club

The Girl Scout Club aims to give girls interested in scouting opportunities to keep in contact with the Girl Scout movement.

The activities this year have been largely in preparation for the College Scout Club Conference which is held annually at Cedar Hill, Waltham, in March, and was this year sponsored by our club. The delegates from the other colleges and our own girls found that through this conference they had gained inspiration to go on in scouting. Miss Mary Doyle, president of the Massachusetts Golden Eaglets gave a valuable talk, and all profited from the enlightening closing ceremony, Scouts Own. All enjoyed the "Night of Fun," and many new friendships were formed.

The other meetings this year were devoted to scout work, a lecture by Miss Helen Potter, Massachusetts state director, and several social meetings, including a party for the Girl Scouts in the Training School, and a supper hike.

The club was most fortunate in having Miss Bunton as faculty adviser. The officers were: President, Margaret Cunningham; Vice President, Catherine Castle; Secretary, Dorothy Littlehale; Treasurer, Philomena Buccelli.

ART CLUB

Second Row: V. Papamechail, L. Hosker, H. Anderson, T. Butler, C. Cummings
First Row: A. Smith, E. Manuel, Miss Perry, Faculty Adviser; G. Boyd, O. Flint

Art Club

The Art Club organized late in September, after conducting tryouts to qualify candidates for membership. The officers for the year are President, Edith Manuel; Vice President, Gwendolyn Boyd; Secretary, Alice Smith; Treasurer, Helena Anderson.

Each club member invited a guest to a Hallowe'en party, which was held in the art room. The decorations, games and refreshments helped to make the party a success.

During the Christmas season, the members made gesso boxes of varied colors. Block printing, sketching, batik work and the making of marionettes were included in the club's activities for the year. Much interest and enthusiasm has been aroused in marionette shows through the club's project, The Big Parade.

A lecture concerning European art, illustrated by slides, was given by Dr. Pitman as the club's assembly program. For the last meeting a beach party and sketching trip was planned.

MEN'S ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION EXECUTIVE BOARD
Second Row: J. Donovan, J. Cunningham
First Row: Mr. Phillips, Faculty Adviser; C. Kaner, J. Osterman

Men's Athletic Association

The Men's Athletic Association has had an exceptionally fine year, one of the best in the history of the school. As is customary, this organization has done much to contribute to the fine ideals of good sportsmanship and fellowship of the members.

The basketball team, under the direction of Mr. Phillips and William Foley, attained a remarkable record, winning 15 out of the 20 games played. The major games of the season were with Farmington, Gorham, and Bridgewater, the Salemites gaining the advantage over the last two schools on the court. On these occasions a feeling of good-will was promoted between State Teachers College and its opponents.

The social and athletic activities of the year 1932-1933 were greatly enjoyed and the health and fellowship of the members were promoted.

The officers elected for this year's club were: President, Charles Kaner; Vice President, Jack Osterman; Secretary, Norton Demsey; Treasurer, John Donovan.

Women's Athletic Association

One hundred per cent membership of the women of our college has added new life to our association. The Coöperative Council's very successful blanket fee has made such complete membership possible.

The new spirit of the association, its Harvard-Yale teams, its "peppy" athletic events, and its successful social affairs have produced a keen feeling of sportsmanship, loyalty, and genuine interest among W. A. A. members.

The first W. A. A. Country Fair, in which a large part of the school participated, is an example of the novel ideas developed throughout the year. A fortune-telling booth, at which the members eagerly learned of their past and future, added zest to the afternoon's program. Penny games of chance intermingled with clever entertainment made the Country Fair a gala event.

During 1932 and 1933 the W. A. A. completed a memorable school year. The officers and executive board, with the coöperation of Miss Wallace and Miss Gourville, have instilled new life, new spirit, and greatest of all, new interest into the association.

The slogan behind all W. A. A. games, socials, teas, and mass meetings during the school year has been: "Every girl an active W. A. A. member."

Harvard-Yale Competition

Never before in the history of the W. A. A. have so large a percentage of its members proved to be such loyal boosters and participants. As a result, the organization has found it necessary to subdivide into Harvard and Yale sections. The hygiene room, the unofficial gathering-place of the "athletes," has shown evidence of keen individual competition and of group rivalry between the two sections. With the bulletin board as the medium of communication, new posters each week have emphasized the value of the Harvard and Yale teams, and have kept student interest alive.

It has been gratifying to note the amazing popularity of John Harvard and the Yale bulldog at Salem Teachers College. John has been seen at teas and dances, standing with club in hand, faithfully watching over the welfare of his followers. Yale, not to be outdone, disregarding etiquette, has taken the bulldog to the teas where he quietly waited for a chance to go into action.

Harvard songs and Yale cheers have reëchoed in the gymnasium. There were seen the cheer leaders wearing the red and white or the blue and white, lustily cheering their teams on to victory. To make the Harvard or the Yale team has been the chief aim of each member of the W. A. A. Those who were unsuccessful cheerfully swallowed their disappointment and loyally attended the games to support the fortunate ones.

Harvard-Yale Teas

On two Tuesday afternoons during the year our gymnasium was the scene of enjoyable W. A. A. teas. On February twenty-eighth, the spirit of Harvard-Yale competition was an added feature at the tea dance.

As the guests entered the gymnasium they were presented with banners which displayed their team's color. Rival tea tables with flickering candles attracted their respective supporters. The tables were presided over by the competing captains, May Conway of Harvard, and Miriam Staples of Yale. From behind the tables, John Harvard and Eli's bulldog viewed the scene. On the dance floor the Harvard-Yale spirit waxed high, and a large group of happy guests pronounced the tea a great social success.

The spirit of friendly rivalry and competition had been used on the athletic field and in the gymnasium before, but this spirit was now transferred to the social dance floor, leaving a pleasant and lasting impression of W. A. A. teas in the memories of our members.

Yours for more and equally good W. A. A. teas next year!

ROUND~UP

The first annual Round-Up of the Women's Athletic Association was held on Wednesday, March 1, 1933. The fun began with meetings of the two teams. Harvard used the English room, and was led by Acting-Captain Phil Buccelli; Yale used the hygiene room, and the meeting was conducted by Captain Miriam Staples. Both meetings were of the same type. Cheers were practiced, and plans for the coming series of basketball games were discussed.

At 4.00 the meetings were adjourned to the gym. Here the teams mingled in games and fun. Among the games played were Anatomy Tag, Guard-the Pins, and Partner Dodge Ball. The next feature was a Barnyard Treasure Hunt. After the treasure had been discovered, the teams rested for a few minutes while Rita White, head of sports, announced the teams for the next series. The final event was the Virginia Reel, which gave a great deal of fun and an opportunity for much "clowning."

One of the most noticeable things about the Round-Up was the ease with which team partisanship was forgotten. This seems to indicate that the team members are A. A. girls first and sports rivals afterwards.

The Orange and the Brown

The musical score is written in G major (one sharp) and 4/4 time. It consists of five systems of music, each with a vocal line and a piano accompaniment line. The lyrics are as follows:

In the quaint old town of Sa-lem There's a dear old Nor-mal School, Where Through the hap-py hours at Nor-mal, In the rooms we loved so well, With the loy-al-ty's the watch-word And sym-pa-thy's the ruse We will

Privately Printed

The 1933 STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE YEAR BOOK is a fine example of a limited edition, privately printed.

The staff of this book and an increasing number of other private publishers have been turning to organizations which specialize in the production of fine brochures, magazines, and privately printed books. For more than a century The Andover Press has served such publishers, planning and printing class annuals, descriptive booklets, genealogies, and other quality publications.

An Easier Way to Teach Shorthand and Typing

GREGG SPEED BUILDING

By JOHN ROBERT GREGG

The Text Which Is Itself a Daily Teaching Plan

No more need for the advanced shorthand teacher to prepare theory reviews or adapt the material in a dictation book to speed building. Every day's assignment is already scientifically laid out for the student in his own text. You will be enthusiastic over the possibilities of GREGG SPEED BUILDING in your own classes.

GREGG TYPING

Techniques and Projects

The book that shows you the easy and correct way to change stumbling thumbs into flying fingers.

GREGG TYPING is the first text to build its keyboard lessons on facts discovered from motion-picture studies of the fingers of expert typists in action. GREGG TYPING students are trained to type as experts do. They start right, they learn quickly, and they put their skill to practical use, and when they complete GREGG TYPING, they are competent typists, fully trained for the job.

That is why The Merriam-Webster is the "Supreme Authority"; is the most widely used reference work in the world; is universally accepted in the courts, colleges, schools, and libraries.

WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

"The Supreme Authority"

Every State that has adopted an unabridged dictionary for use in its schools has chosen exclusively The Merriam-Webster.

Nearly 100% of all schoolbooks are based on the New International for pronunciation, spelling, compounding, and division of words.

The Colleges voted overwhelmingly in favor of Webster as the standard of pronunciation, in answer to questions submitted by the Chicago Woman's Club.
