

ON THIS SPOT

In October 1626 are said to have landed Roger Conant and his followers.

Long, long before this, in the year 1,000, the hardy Norseman Leif Ericson, son of the great adventurer and Viking, Eric the Red, visited New England.

Early traditions would seem to indicate that he visited this shore (Vinland) during his epoch making cruise.

Earlier still, back in the days of the cave men, the last of the glaciers ground and tore its thundering way over these very rocks fighting the breaking day as the glorious sun rose in triumph over the blackness of the night and losing its fight, in a last mighty struggle, flung its icy battalions into the sea and vanished.

This is the history of Stromberg's Landing
