Foreword

THE senior annual of Salem Teachers College appears this year bearing for the first time a distinctive name. We believe that this name speaks for itself and truly symbolizes the traditions and ideals of our college. Salem, the third oldest teacher-training institution in the country, was opened in 1854 at the height of the clipper ship era when those greyhounds of the sea were charting their way through unknown paths, pioneering, opening the way to fresh enterprise. But while the clipper of the sea has long since passed beyond the realm of usefulness and into the limbo of memory, Salem, the clipper ship of education, still plies the seas of thought and continues to advance the frontiers of human enlightenment in the interest not of a single group but of the social whole. It is the hope of the editorial staff that the Clipper of 1936 has in a measure done justice to the spirit of the college of which it is a symbol, and to the student body whose memory it seeks to perpetuate.

Teaching is a Profession

In these later years in the history of education the professional aspects of teaching are no longer questioned. Whatever the position of either the individual or the institution involved in the discussion, it must be admitted that teaching is both a science and an art. This admission, then, clearly implies in addition to a broad and thorough general and cultural education, both professional aptitude and technical training. The former, so far as it is a natural ability, may well be ascertained by appropriate tests as an essential requirement of candidates for the teaching profession; but however great may be this potential power, it must be developed by long and careful training and by experience under the best conditions that may be possible, based upon a thorough knowledge of sound educational principles.

But a professional attitude is of vastly greater importance than either natural or acquired professional aptitude. Whatever the occupation may be, a thorough preparation for it and the discharge of its duties and responsibilities require a spirit of service that can only be attained through a real sacrifice on the part of the individual engaged; and in this way alone the greatest possible benefits are secured to those who are served. And to the person who really possesses a professional attitude toward his work, whatever it may be, the joy of this service is his greatest reward. It is this missionary spirit, if you will, that is the superior teacher's constant incentive to leave the world better than he found it and thus to extend his influence far beyond the limited period of time that is allotted to any individual life.

And who are the people whom we in the teaching profession are to serve? Of course they are the parents of the pupils whom we teach and all the other supporters of our institutions and systems of education, whether public or private; but our chief obligation is to the children of today who are to be the men and women of a tomorrow which ought to bring an improved social order that will be in some measure better than that of today because we have lived and worked consistently, intelligently, and conscientiously toward that end. In this sense, we are projecting our own lives into the future. Surely this is a responsibility that calls for the most careful preparation and our most earnest efforts.

A professional attitude implies a diligent search for truth, wherever it may be found, and the reward of this quest comes only to those of an open mind. The truly professional worker distinguishes between matters of fact and matters of opinion. To be sure, opinions may be facts, but they must be proven to be such beyond the possibility of a doubt. The varying uses which may be made of this factual knowledge and the possible differences in the application of immutable and universal principles and laws afford an urge to constant study. Education is not static but progressive in a very real sense: for the world moves and in our day it is moving rapidly.

The professional worker in our particular field of service, than which there is no greater in all human society, inevitably becomes possessed of such habits of study as will result in a conscientious and concentrated effort to grow in efficiency and in far-reaching influence throughout the entire period of his teaching experience. And the exercise of these habits bring their own rewards in terms of increasing pleasure and genuine satisfaction to the teacher.

If these observations seem to be no more than merely obvious abstractions, we have only to remember that there is nothing that is more concrete than the individual mind and soul that we are influencing through the exercise of the teaching process. And it is through the existence of these intimate personal relationships and their results as they sometimes become known to us after the lapse of many years that we teachers find our greatest and most enduring satisfactions.

GENEVIEVE COTTER

We shall always consider "Gibby" a member of the class of 1936. She was forced to leave in December, 1935, because of illness, but her pleasant manner, her helpfulness, and her happy spirit make her one of our best-loved classmates.

Camera Club 2; John Burroughs Club 1; Class Representative 1, 2; Chairman Social Committee 2, 3.

EDNA GAINEY CARROLL

Wedding bells called Edna away from classes last November, and she became Mrs. James Carroll. We shall forever remember her as a cheerful, enthusiastic, lovable member of the junior high class. May this true friend and classmate be always successful in her married life.

S. T. C. Holding Company
Commercial Corporation

1932-33

SEPTEMBER

The Board of Directors met in joint session with the shareholders of the several amalgamated companies included in the Salem Teachers College Holding Company. After a brief meeting directed by Mr. Sproul, one of the triumvirate guiding the destinies of the mother company in the absence of President Pitman, the several subsidiary corporations adjourned to their respective headquarters.

Being new shareholders, just introduced into the Commercial Company of S. T. C. Inc., we were guided by older members to our rendezvous. From 10 A.M. on, we were introduced to members of the board of our particular corporation. Mr. Sproul, director of the Commercial Company, was introduced to us. Other members of the board, the Messrs. Phillips, Whitman, Doner, and the Misses FitzHugh, Flanders, Edwards, Roberts, Badger, and Gourville followed in rapid succession. We soon learned that each member of the board was a specialist in his particular field and would guide us to be better stockholders in the company.

OCTOBER

The personnel department of the several joint companies conducted a tea for the new shareholders. Here we met other new shareholders of the amalgamated companies.

When we returned for another meeting, we elected Mr. Anthony DePippo as representative of the new stockholders to represent our corporation at future board meetings.

We found pleasant company around us and soon learned that the senior shareholders were to initiate us into the rites of the Commercial Company. The general initiation was hilarious and enjoyable, but the real test came before that—when the male stockholders massed together and showed the greenhorns how hard a substance wood really is, especially if used in the shape of a thin, perforated paddle. Anyway, sitting was confined to easy chairs over the week-end.

DECEMBER

Miss Badger, one of our directors, showed us her appreciation of our services by giving us a Christmas party. Talent heretofore unknown was discovered. Maybe we can capitalize on that later.

JANUARY

Returned to our duties tired and ready to recuperate between January 2 and the next vacation period.

First semi-annual dividends were declared. Are these the rewards of our capital and effort? Hope the company does better next time.

MARCH

We are told that we are the worst stockholders in the entire company.

JUNE

We all enjoyed ourselves at the corporation picnic held at Devereux Beach, Marblehead. Incidentally, transportation methods were quite modern.

Our fiscal period is over. Dividends again declared—prospects a bit more encouraging this time, but just a bit. Oh well, vacation days are here—let's retire and forget about business for a while.

1933-34

SEPTEMBER

Back to duties after a heavenly vacation. We regretted to learn that a few of our fellow stockholders had sold out—some to become members of competing firms, others to retire or perhaps enter business for themselves.

We also discovered that many had had that practical business experience that is required of them by the Commercial Company. Something like the letter carrier who goes walking on his day off it seems to us, but wiser heads tell us 'tis best.

We would have appreciated handshaking machines that day.

OCTOBER

Director Ware's Boston Harbor party enjoyed by all. Miss Ware, importing and exporting expert for the consolidated companies, pointed out to us from A-Z how, why, where, and when our goods should be shipped. After the day on sea, most of us tired business men and women retired to cafes and theatres for an evening of relaxation.

Elected Christine Yagjian to represent us in the amalgamated company meetings.

We took part in initiating the new shareholders. What fun! It must be the beast in us, or something. Eye for eye. Paddle for paddle.

JANUARY

Semi-annual dividends—reactions variable.

FEBRUARY

Our great production, the play on good salesmanship, brings out excellent comment and a sizeable attendance at the assembly hall, for a change. Director Roberts of the personnel department was well-pleased with our performance. So were we. Not that we're bragging, but it was one of the best assemblies put on within our memory.

Valentine party. Need more be said?

MAY

The Commercial Company held its first annual banquet. Our corporation attended 100 per cent. Shall we ever forget it? (Neither will the caterer.) "Turkey"—our new shibboleth.

JUNE

Having joined the Middle Class Association, we became active in preparing our holding company for the close of its fiscal period. Members of our corporation served on various committees for the garden tea. We also joined the several consolidated sophomore companies in the chorus for class day.

To wind up a successful year in the association, we had an outing at Wingershaek Beach, Gloucester. Hats off to the organizers of that party! Remember those delicious clams, weenies, and watermelons?

SEPTEMBER

Only 28 out of the 45 shareholders that started with us in 1932 remain. The directors certainly know how to weed them out, but why must they pick on the good sports? We huddle closer together than ever. With norms, and skews, and weird figures just before us, we seek mutual aid.

Elected Raymond Amiro to represent us at company meetings.

OCTOBER

Under the supervision of Director Phillips, accountant, banker, and lawyer, the corporation met a group of Lowell Teachers College shareholders at the South Station in Boston for a tour through the business section of that city—banks, stock market, Ford Assembly Plant, Boston Herald news plant. Very, very interesting—as were the theatres afterward.

DECEMBER

The Commercial Company, better known as the Commercial Club, is fast becoming a busy organization. Held its first annual Christmas party. Santa Claus was the big attraction—and wasn't he the cutest thing? Who of us will doubt him now?

MAY

Commercial Club held its second annual banquet. Excellent attendance, excellent food, and, as usual, excellent appetites.

JUNE

As members of the Middle Class Association, we again participated in the activities of closing the fiscal year, this time having more responsible duties.

A picnic at Salem Willows with the other middle class members—and then that hard-earned vacation.

1935-36

SEPTEMBER

The same 28 return with one addition. We are now the senior stockholders, and can hardly believe it. All eyes on us.

Introduced to sociology.

OCTOBER

Joined the personnel department and conducted a tea for the new shareholders, our proteges, by the way.

Our turn to take charge of initiating the new stockholders to the Commercial Company; and did we do a job on them! Before the general initiation, first the males, then their fairer sisters, eagerly haunted the shower room.

And of course we can't forget how uniquely they danced for us at lunch time.

DECEMBER

Christmas and another party by the Commercial Club. Where was Santa Claus?

JANUARY

Miss Edwards, sign director, arranged to have us all spend the day at various high schools in Boston so that we might observe how others in the same profession are managing.

FEBRUARY

At last we rise to the dignity of directors and set out to put into practice the laws and by-laws we have been subjected to for the past four years. For nine weeks we are to be scattered in various high schools of the state.

MAY

Dolefully, we return to our humble position of mere shareholders. We eagerly scan each other to see if we too have acquired that "unmistakable" attitude, appearance, or what-have-you.

JUNE

The rising market again urges us on. We donate our shares of stock to the firm as treasury stock, receiving in return, a perpetual certificate of incorporation.

With this certificate, we earnestly and hopefully set out to see what the new educational market has in store for us.

Querities and Quips

- Olga: "Now to use the scientific method of thinking."
Ray: "Let us unite in the Lord's Prayer."

Tony: "As president of the I. R. C." "It's a game we play."
Betty: "Oh, Olga, that's a crazy idea."
Margie: "Now, girls, don't get catty."
El: "Did you hear about little Aubrey and the white handkerchief?"
Ailene: "Why? I can't see that."
Myrtle: "Now, Eleanor, you let Paul alone."
Gosty: "What's going on now? Wait for me."
Mary B.: "I just wanna make an announcement."
Iggy: "She makes me sick." "Oh, don't be foolish."
Chippy: "Oh, that's easy." "I have mine all done."
Alice: "You haven't heard anything yet."
Mary D.: "And little Aubrey's mother laughed and laughed because Aubrey broke his neck in three places."
Lillian: "Only three more rows to go, girls."
Paul: "That's right, Myrtle."
Kay: "Oh, I forgot to go to class."
Frank: "When I taught accounting in Taunton—Is that true?—Gee-e-e."
Chris: "I rise to a point of order."
Gertrude: "Oh, Anna, can't you see that?"
Sally: "I'd like to teach in Porto Rico."
Irma: "Do you realize all we've got to do?"
Ruthie: "Be that as it may." "They do that in Springfield."
Anna: "I don't believe it."
Dot: "Gosh, I have so many things to do."
Dene: "Not interested."
Maurice: "Don't get me wrong." "Hey, take it easy." "Have you typed your notes yet?"

Junior High Episodes

I

With hearts that were panty
And suits that were scanty
We made our debuts.
How much do you weigh?
And what do you eat?
Do you sleep well at night?
Do you worry? (You might!)

Hardly a chorus for Ziegfeld
Tall Ones
Short Ones
Fat Ones
Thin Ones
and lone boys.

Nobody paid much attention to us
And this we thought most curious
As WE had been selected
From
Long
Waiting
List! !

Around we did wander (like the music)
To classes most strange and terrific:
Biology!
Psychology!
Ancient History!
How to Tell Stories!

At first we were formal
And names began Miss——
But soon the locker rang
With our Christian names
In tones not especially orthodox (or professional).

Initiation to us was a Frankenstein
But Shakespeare came to the rescue.
Quoth Barbara, "Romeo, My Romeo!"
And Romeo, alias Phil Cutter—blushed!

In classes we strove and strained
For knowledge, or was it for A's?
But quickly in our "spares"
We forgot all our cares!

From the fragrant town of Gloucester
Came O'Neil and Quinn;
And Rourkie from Lynn.
These were our chief "gloom chasers."
Quinnie once fainted to the teacher's dismay
But to our relief as we had a test that day!
O'Neil once chose to ride on a mare
The class held its nose as she rode by
'Twas the mare of the garbage wagon she rode!

II

Return in the fall
To the old chapel.
Wiser and older
With the ropes in our hands.

One morning from the skies
A young man was dropt.
He landed exactly
In front of the hall!

A hungry mob were we,
On the least provocation
Our money we pooled,
To buy eclaires and cream puffs
To eat in empty classrooms.

Impressions of our soles
We did make
On brown paper so neat.
Hold them up, please. Any flat feet?

For a month we observed
The moon for reasons—geographical—
Not romantic.
But queries were many
When certain young ladies
Reported observations at 2.30 A.M.!

Riddle:

We brought them in bottles,
We carried them to classes.
The teachers did frown
When we lost them.

We initiated the "new ones"
In a way of our own.
Coach Levy, dear coachie,
May I kick the ball now?

One night we were most bold
In suits we wheedled from
Butchers, bakers, and candlestick makers
We aped the stronger sex!
Edna was best man of all.

Grown tired of our terrible "rep"
We decided to give a surprise,
All day in the hall
Rang the Bells. Bells. Bells!
We made all sit up
With our choral speech.

To add to our dignity
We gave a puppet show
With a lady of beauty
And a terrible dragon
Who was killed by the hero!

At Wingershaek Beach
On the last day of school
We fooled and fooled and fooled.
Of course we had never done that before!

III

TRAINING

With a tremulous trembling
And a quivering quaking
All hidden by a blase blandness,
We made a decorous debut
To our pedagogic profession.

HARD WORK

Papers, projects, problems, papers,
Give me air and let me breathe!
Projects, papers, outlines, projects,
Oh, how my work worn brain doth seethe!
Guess I'll take tomorrow off,
An easy day—I won't miss much.
But others had the same design
And now the whole class is in Dutch.

ROMANCE

Oh, Eros, cunning Cupid,
What are you doing now?
Our Hatfield's in your clutches
And Frankie's in your tow;
While Mary is your handmaid
And Mike's the willing beau.

OPERETTA

Lillian . . . languid, lissom, lovely;
Dennis . . . dapper, daring, dashing.
What's come o'er us? Are we dreaming?
Can this be what we see?
For our Lil has clutched our Foley
Tightly round his straining neck,
And the poor man has a hard time
In shaking off the designing wench.
(Never fear—'tis only a playful mood
Of the Thespian Muse.)

GEOGRAPHY EXHIBIT

A Dutch cheese and a Chinese gong
Made friends with a little Swiss cow;
A French glove and a Russian cape
Hung side by side on the wall.
A Danish brooch and a Spanish comb
Gaily bowed to a Japanese fan,
While an Irish jug and an English mug
Really talked to a little Swedish man.
(Miss Ware made all the introductions.)

W. A. A. CIRCUS

As a charmer in the circus
Frankie was a great success;
For to her charm each snake succumbed,
Nor did she charm her audience the less.

IV

HARBOR TRIP

On a crisp, brisk October day
We wended our way to Boston Bay
To learn about the nautical life
Until our heads with facts were rife.
Dot and Ruby were tardy,
Ruby made the boat on time,
But Dot had a thrilling and exciting rescue
By a longshoreman, brave, brawny, and hardy.
We cruised leisurely along the historic coast:
The breeze was salt and tart and strong.
Too strong for Edna's little navy hat
Which sailed away to see the world.
Finally we salvaged it, shrunken and wan,
But we're afraid it was never again the same.

PORT REPORT

Bananas come in great bunches of bananas
To Boston where the banana business
Is booming because bananas are bountiful.

EDNA'S MARRIAGE

Joy and sorrow are sometimes mixed
To blend in strange emotion.
That's how we felt when first we heard
Of Edna's coming marriage.
We wished her happiness and joy,
Those old and sincere wishes;
And may her life have love and grace,
Her heart be ever glad.

JUNIOR HIGH I CHRISTMAS PARTY

Where do you coffeepot, Miss Stone?

CHRISTMAS PAGEANT

Shepherds tall and herdsmen small,
Herdsmen in cheesecloth and shepherds in sackcloth.
A motley assortment of pastoral folk . . .
Silent night, holy night.
The shepherds rise up at the sight,
The shepherds follow the starry light:
The wandering shepherds approach the place,
The shepherds worship Thy childlike face.

PARTY BEFORE TRAINING

Before training we had a party,
In Miss Burnham's room, with much to eat,
(Almost the main point.)
For entertainment we discovered
Undeveloped latent talent
In the art of impersonation.
Very amusing—and illuminating.

A LOST LETTER

Mr. Levy wrote a letter
For some vital information
To the renowned city of Hamburg.
Mr. Levy waited, then he waited a little more;
But no answer came from Hamburg.
From Hamburg came no answer
To the waiting Mr. Levy.
So by alternating methods
By induction and deduction
Mr. Levy solved the riddle.
Said Mr. Levy one morning in geography:
"I should have signed the name 'O'Brien'."

EPILOGUE

We have passed through a quartet of years together;
We have worked, played a little, laughed, cried a little;
And now we may call ourselves—Alumni.

Merry Go Round

1933-1934

- September 12—The Merry-Go-Round whirled off with 70 Elementary Freshmen aboard, all very young and confident. The calliope was a novelty.
- October 5—Freshman reception at 3.00 P.M. with excerpts from the operetta of previous year given by upper classmen. Calliope music soothing as we danced in the Assembly Hall.
- October 12—The first holiday; we left our hobby horses.
- October 13—Back riding the merry-go-round in earnest. The music growing more distinct.
- November 10—The Seniors won the interclass singing contest but our efforts were well applauded. We began to feel the collegiate spirit and reined in our steeds with assurance.
- November 17—Alas! misplaced assurance! The seniors stampeded our horses at the initiation where, in a Trial by Jury, we were subjected to shocking humiliations.
- December 8—Our first gala affair occurred as we slowed down our pace and muted our calliope to hear the annual Pops Concert with Walter Smith as soloist.
- December 21—The music and the merry-go-round were stilled as we departed for a sorely needed vacation. Papers and projects prevented any "rest".
- January 2—We hailed one another's return as we pranced by, but the grind started and the calliope music became insistent.
- January 2—The end of one semester. Slowed down to let off a few weary riders. Our one man still with us.
- February—A vacation—"at last!" say some. Others haunted by the recurrent theme of the calliope, dread returning to its monotony.
- March 23—We took an option on the Glee Club at Worcester Tech to give a joint concert and dance with S. T. C. The boys particularly liked the freshman technique.
- April 13—The W. A. A. Mock Man Dance harked back to the Gay 90's with the Floradora Girls' return.
- April 27—Big turnout for the Council Dance. Preponderance of freshies.
- April 25—We at last subdued the calliope. Freshmen won the inter-class singing contest, their first victory as a class.
- June 7—We shook off the growing dizziness of the calliope din to attend the W. A. A. banquet where the awards were made. Proud of our members, many of whom were elected to the board for next year.
- June 13—The juice was turned off and the voice of the calliope was as quiet as the merry-go-round itself. We'll be back in the fall to curry our horses.

1934-1935

- September—Off to a flying start, minus our one man. The tunes this year were different but somehow the calliope sounded the same. However, we were Sophomores, so merry-go-round, calliope, or ticket collectors meant nothing to us.
- October 19—Revenge is sweet! Another freshman initiation, the sophomores supplying the entertainment with a parody on a rural school.
- October 27—Mary Boisclair elected Vice-President of the Middle Class. A victory for the elementary class.
- November—Thanksgiving recess and we learned anew why it was called Thanksgiving. The music was becoming annoying and persistent.

- December 5—A new plan introduced by the council whereby each class is to meet bi-monthly with its class adviser.
- December 14—Another Mock Man Dance. Pioneer motif this time. The females had better not be too independent.
- December 21—Christmas carols and candlelight will bring peace to weary ears and eyes.
- January 2—Riding hard again; calliope blasts met us when we returned. The ticket men on hand.
- January 11—W. A. A. and M. A. A. at last united to give a formal dance in the assembly hall. A grand success.
- January 20—The semester is over. War clouds threaten us. Tomorrow a new semester. The records on the calliope have been changed.
- February—No more assembly programs to be given by the classes.
- February 27—At last the training school has dropped its anonymity. With due ceremony it has been christened the Horace Mann Training School.
- April—The Eastern States Conference of Teachers Colleges revealed that Salem pays the lowest blanket fee. Something to think about, what?
- May 11—State Teachers Colleges held a Play Day in which Salem had a part.
- May—Hurray! The circus is in town. W. A. A. circus in lower field a huge success. We missed the calliope.
- June 11—The Middle Class, playing the gracious hostess, gave an academic tea to the senior class. Extremely attractive waitresses.
- June 12—Calliope out of order for the summer; middle class picnic at the Willows. School's out! Pleasant and lazy vacation to you.

1935-1936

- September 11—School's in! Elementary registration heads other classes. We are old enough now to feel compassion for the green freshmen. The sophs seem very sophmoric and energetic to us blase seniors. This merry-go-round is whirling faster and the calliope is deafening. Looks like a hard year.
- October—Sailing, sailing over Boston harbor with Miss Flanders on a field trip. Wish more of our classes were conducted likewise.
- October—Senior class election—Beatrice Austin, treasurer, is from the elementaries.
- November 8—Another stopping-off place and end of quarter. Got the freshmen off for a good holiday by initiating them into the chain gang. The merry-go-round stopped long enough to take in those students who had been training and let off those due in training November 12.
- December 20—The First Noel, senior class pageant, simple but beautiful. Sent us off in the right spirit for our last Christmas vacation.
- January 2—Back again. The horses are becoming unmanageable and we are having difficulty with conductors because our tickets are not ready. We miss our gym instructor, Miss Gourville, but are proud of her promotion to head of the Physical Education department at Lowell.
- January 10—Men's Glee Club joins with women's Glee Club to give annual Pops Concert. Three new conductors. Miss Rowe, Mrs. Daniel, Miss McGlynn, to take tickets and run the calliope. Everyone enjoyed the tea given in their honor.
- January 20—The records are being changed again; the tempo is apallingly fast. We're looking ahead to June.

- February 21—A change of scenery now with a week's vacation in view. The strains of the calliope haunt us.
- March 1—Back for more. In a week the dizzy whirl has reduced us to dejection again. The conductors are hounding us for tickets.
- March 30—Calliope! Conductors! We're going 'round-'n-'round—and nothing comes out on time. June looks dim and distant—also dubious.
- April 9—Three days of freedom for Easter holiday; then, back to the old grind.
- May 4—A glorious recess, with summer in the offing, has ended. One more lap until June and graduation. The calliope is still raucus but it holds a minor note.
- May 16—Sports Day with Salem as hostess. Lowell and Bridgewater the guests.
- May 22—Pickles, joint glee club operetta, was a glowing success. It was the last performance for some of us. The calliope is slowly being muted by the demands for graduation rehearsals.
- May 30—Our last holiday—two more weeks. Somehow we are not quite so joyous as we thought we might be. No new records for the calliope . . . the horses are getting tired . . . almost time for the merry-go-round to stop.
- June 10—Annual outing.
- June 11—Class day banquet and speeches. Pangs of regret beginning to grow. The faculty are suddenly very desirable friends and the grounds home-like.
- June 12—Graduation exercises. Senior reception in the transformed assembly hall, was the climax of graduation week. Dances and farewells . . . grins and quavering smiles . . . lights and music . . . the calliope is dumb . . . the ticket men are sorry to see us go, but the merry-go-round has stopped and the ride has ended.

Thirteen of Us

September 11 marked the eventful gathering of the clan. Not one of us knew that day just who was to be a member of that distinguished class of graduates. However, but a brief amount of time had to elapse before one could discern among the motley groups gathered about, outstanding classmates returning with the intention of staying another year with our Alma Mater. The total number of conscriptees amounted to twelve. But Lady Luck insisted on holding our hands. With her magnetic appeal she induced Mary Carter to join, making us a "Lucky Thirteen."

As we had our diplomas, the fall of 1935 found many of our optimistic athletic sorority seriously engaged in the sports that "carry over into later life." Many a "spare" was devoted to batting tennis balls about and driving thin air with golf clubs. All were attempting to be terrestrial stars.

Our experienced clansmen on November 12 ventured forth over Greater Boston to share our knowledge with the precious bits of humanity in our care.

Since we could not be absent one from the other for nine whole weeks, a reunion was held in Boston where a farewell party was tendered Miss Gourville, our beloved adviser. Shall we ever forget that day!

On January 21 our class reassembled at college. Many of us with long faces were despairing that our visits had not been longer. Mary Carter, Margaret Murphy and Erma Buker reported great triumphs. Each one presented A's as evidence of overwhelming victories.

Museum fatigue was painfully endured on March 4 in our search for culture at the Harvard Museums.

The blustery month of March was certainly a flustery one with theses claiming every spare moment. Everyone of us worked under pressure for the coveted B.S. in Education.

The one and only free dance of the year attracted many of our number to display their skill at the highland fling on April 17.

Amid many fond farewells and well wishes for success on June 12 we crossed the portals of S. T. C. proudly displaying our "Bachelors". Each of us took up his individual way never to be a part of that famous class of graduates again.

Special Education History

On Wednesday morning, September 11, 1935, seven very excited young ladies met in the mysterious room on the third floor of the State Teachers College, Salem, Massachusetts, known to the rest of the school as the special education room. They talked in whispers; to speak aloud would be beneath the dignity of a newly created "special". For three years we had heard about "special eds"; now we were "specials", such honor was not to be taken lightly.

The following day two more were admitted to the ranks of the specials; on Friday still another joined the group; and on Monday the last two candidates were admitted. With furious zeal we set to work, anxious to maintain the reputation that the "special eds" were the hardest workers in S. T. C.

Life went along smoothly for awhile. The intricacies of I. Q.'s, moron levels, imbecility, idiocy, and all the rest were digested eagerly. We caught at a chance remark by our leader that we were taking a graduate course; it helped to swell our sense of self-importance, and we worked accordingly in order to earn the privilege of being "graduate students." This remark had another effect; our select group could not mingle with the undergraduates of S. T. C. in the lunchroom at noontime; it was beneath our dignity to raise our voices. The corner drug store across from the school became our luncheon headquarters for the entire year—in rain, snow or what-have-you.

October was an important month for the specials. We took our first class excursion in the form of a week-end trip to Mt. Monadnock with Miss Hoff, our faculty adviser, Mr. and Mrs. Little, and their daughter, Phyllis. Nearly a hundred miles away from S. T. C. we dropped our superfluous dignity and romped like ten-year-olds. (No, faculty members were not exempt; they climbed the mountain—and climbed trees, too!)

On returning to Salem we discovered that a miraculous change had been wrought; we no longer found it necessary to act like fragile china dolls; we could be graduate students and still act naturally.

Two other new experiences came in October—our first actual teaching in the training school and our first outside observation, made at the Center School, Salem.

November brought an introduction to units; the word "unit" has been a password ever since among the specials. At this time, too, we were initiated into the mysteries of four-harness loom weaving—a fascinating pastime. In November, also, we traveled to Lynn for observation. And we had tests on Hollingworth which only specials can appreciate!

Before the month was up we had lost one of our twelve; it was our loss and her gain, since the lost member, Eleanor McGlew, had obtained a position as special class teacher in Newburyport.

December brought the usual pre-Christmas rush of school work, but with it came two of our most interesting field trips, one to the Walter E. Fernald State School at Waverly and one to the public school classes of Boston.

On the Tuesday before vacation a lull came in the work. Miss Hoff invited us to be her guests for a Christmas party; accordingly, we met in the science lecture room where she showed us pictures of her trip to Palestine and the Near East. At the close we returned to our room for lunch.

The very day before Christmas vacation we gave our training school class their party. Then on Friday afternoon at the close of the Christmas pageant we parted for the first long break since our organization in September.

The New Year brought back a rested group of specials ready to attack Terman, Hollingworth, or any one else with equal avidity; Morgan was the unfortunate one, and we devoured him. More exams came at us from right and left before the New Year was a month old, notwithstanding work for the F. B. E. S. (for specials only) which served to bolster our self-importance one more step.

With the end of January and the beginning of February an air of tenseness developed; we were coming closer and closer to the fatal date when we would leave our favorite "home" on the third floor and go forth to our various experiment stations for training. Notebooks and what-nots in the meantime increased the furrows on our brows.

February seventh a sad farewell was said before the embryonic pedagogues set out. Not until March 18 did we meet again, and then at a very delightful party at Mr. Little's home.

On March 28 we met in conference at "our room". The room itself had not changed, but we had. Slowly, in an indefinable manner, the specials were growing up; there was an air of professional responsibility that lay heavily upon the shoulders of the group. We were performing in a dramatic scene—and we had to carry out our parts to the letter.

The specials returned home to S. T. C. on April 21. Excitement ran high on the third floor as the magpies chattered of experiences during their absence. September's dignity was entirely forgotten, now that June and graduation were but six weeks away.

May was a month of work and play, bringing with it an observation trip to Danvers State Hospital.

June, tritely speaking, was short and sweet: Examinations, final reports, general excitement, graduation.

Ordinarily graduation would have been the end. For the other senior classes it was, but we remained "specials" to the end. Our final parting came not with graduation but two weeks later when—degrees safely put away to await the call of the superintendents who were to find us those positions—under the guidance of the same gracious friends who took us to Mt. Monadnock the previous fall, we climbed Mt. Washington.

To the Practice Teacher

You try so hard to hide your smile,
Your aim is to be prim,
But from inside you after a while
Bursts forth a dimpled grin.

Some pupils think you'll be a "Crank,"
Some think you're very nice,
But all know that you're very frank,
Your virtues have no price.

You give homework out to every class,
You're very strict and stern,
"Wait for the bell before you pass,
Some day you pupils will learn."

You make them all use pen and ink,
A pencil will not do,
"It won't hurt any of you to think."
These words are just a few.

You certainly have caught the "air,"
A teacher you shall be,
That is, if there's a vacant chair,
Or if you happen to be free.

A sense of humor you have within
Which erupts from time to time,
You certainly "can take it" on the chin,
To the "Top" you'll surely climb.

—By a high school student.

Middle Class Council

The Middle Class Council officers were elected in November. The first item of business to come up before the Council was the amending of the constitution. A budget was prepared by the treasurer and passed by a majority of the members of the middle classes.

Five dollars was donated from the council treasury to the Co-operative Council to the fund for dishes. Ten dollars was appropriated for the page in the year book, and five dollars for the Daisy Chain. Dues were established, dates set for payments, and the matter of collecting left in the hands of the individual class representatives.

Eleven regular meetings and three informal meetings were held during the year during which all business relevant to the Middle Classes was discussed and planned. Excellent attendance was always reported.

Under the guidance of our faculty adviser, Miss Gertrude Goldsmith, the Middle Class Council may truly be said to have had a very prosperous year.

The Mathematics Club took as its major activity for the year a study of the part played by visual education in the teaching of mathematics. In October Mr. Phillips gave a very valuable lecture on the use and construction of film strips and lantern slides in the classroom. This talk influenced the group in its study of pictures and construction of slides. In the latter part of the year demonstrations of various types of mathematical recreations were given in the Horace Mann Training School. The social calendar included a Puzzle Party in December, open to the entire student body, Welcome and Christmas parties, and the Annual Banquet, with which the club activities for the year terminated.

W. A. A. Calendar

- September 11—President welcomed freshmen to our ranks and received a grand response.
- September 16—Field ball started with an excellent showing. Games were fast with Yale reaching top at the end of the season, having won every game.
- October 8—Sticks! Clash! Field Hockey season opened with Harvard and Yale both equal in strength. Harvard surpassed her rival, Yale, at the end of the season.
- October 30—Chocolate Tea—Executive Board invited the Freshies to chocolate on Wednesday, October 31, at 3.45.
- November 22—Field Hockey Honor Teams of Harvard and Yale were announced.
- December 2—Three hundred girls reported for Newcomb making the season a very lively and successful one.
- December 8—Banners were flying. All colleges had their emblems displayed on the night of December 8 as the W. A. A. gave its first colorful Sport Dance in the gymnasium.
- January 22—Another Red Letter Day for Yale as she emerges from the Newcomb series as a victor over Harvard.
- February—This was the month of action and fast playing as two hundred girls displayed their ability at Basketball.
- March 17—St. Patrick found a Masquerade Dance in the gymnasium with all nations represented, but he was right at home for the atmosphere represented Old Erin itself with its shamrocks and little Irish cottage.
- March 31—The March winds brought a howling demand for Tea so the W. A. A. answered its demand and issued an invitation for all to attend "March Tea Dance".
- April 3—We received the annual visit from our Alumnae for which occasion we had our Rainbow Supper followed by an excellent series of Basketball games in which our girls had to step fast to save their name.
- May 5—Activities never cease, so that is why Baseball and Volley Ball started with the loyal support of the Harvard and Yale rooters.
- May 16—Bridgewater and Lowell were the guests of Salem for a Sports Day. Something new for Salem, but something she will always remember!
- June 4—Annual Banquet given as the climax of our Sports season with the installation of new officers and the presentation of awards.

EXECUTIVE BOARD
R. Amiro, J. Sampson, F. Carr, Mr. Phillips, J. Wall

Men's Athletic Association

The Men's Athletic Association went into action early in September, and under the direction of President Francis Carr, a program of worthwhile activities for the year was planned. Each year it is customary for the men to present an Armistice Day program to the school. They were fortunate this year in securing for the event the Reverend Garfield Morgan of Lynn, who delivered a most timely and inspiring address to the student body. The men did their part by carrying out a carefully planned program of appropriate singing.

One of the major aims of the Association this year was to entertain the visiting basketball teams in a manner that would be a credit to the college as a whole. Every man responded to the call for co-operation and that aim was accomplished. An effort was made to vary the type of entertainment in the hope that it would stimulate an interest in the hard-working basketball team of which our college can well be proud. Captain Al Levy did a fine job in whipping into shape a "fight to the finish" basketball squad which has been a credit to our college.

Perhaps the outstanding event of the year in the line of entertaining was on the occasion of the game with Keene Normal School of New Hampshire. Overnight the assembly hall was converted into a gala cabaret—small tables on the outer edges of the hall were lighted by candles and were adorned with clever favors; the center portion of the hall gave plenty of room for dancing between the courses of a catered dinner; the Dramatic Club did its part in presenting a play entitled Squaring it with the Boss, which was more than enjoyed. No small part of the success of the affair is due to the co-operation which the president of the Association received from the social committee of the council.

As a member of the New England Teachers College Athletic Conference which was organized last year, Salem Teachers College was well represented at the Annual Field and Track Meet which was held at Leominster in May. Salem entered an organized track team and made a fine showing.

For the second consecutive year the council sent a man to the New York Conference. John Wall was the representative.

The Association is appreciative of the untiring efforts of its adviser, Mr. Phillips, who has done much to make this year a successful one. Many thanks are also due the Dramatic Club for the fine way in which it co-operated in helping to entertain the visiting basketball teams.

To Dr. Pitman the Association is grateful for his sage counsel and helpful suggestions.

A Lot of Bookkeeping In One Year

Intensive Bookkeeping and Accounting

BY

Edwin H. Fearon

This unusual text is a trail blazer in the economical presentation of bookkeeping. It is an instrument for successfully teaching, in one year, the mastery of a subject which heretofore has required from three to four semesters in the average high school. The absence of formal work books makes this program economical in cost, but the greater economy comes from the valuable school time saved for student and teacher.

Other attractive features of this new text in bookkeeping are blackboard drills arranged for teachers in the beginning of the early units for previewing the lesson; problems at the end of the lessons that call into use the principles set forth in the blackboard drills; short, balanced lessons; an appealing style and size of print; instructive illustrations; and beautiful script that inspires neatness and orderliness in handwriting and other phases of bookkeeping work.

From all users, we are getting unstinted praise of this new-era text. To see it will be to want to use it. To use it as a classroom text will be to appraise it as BOOKKEEPING TEXT NUMBER ONE for producing desirable outcomes in this subject. It is in complete harmony with the late trend toward one year of bookkeeping in high school . . . . . List price $1.80
