Well Again!

8 May 45

So hen Howard is over here. That APO. of his will change soon to a much smaller number. And it gives me no clues.

Censorship is strict and mighty, so, considering the chance that one careless word might be important to an enemy ear. The English civilians know more about the location of our troops than we do. American boys really get around. In some towns there are more Americans than Englishmen - the Revolution in reverse.

The countryside has been beautiful in spite of a sudden cold spell. For awhile we thought that we were going to go back to that old fog again. The winter was something to remember. Fog just like the movies - but now the days are clear - sunny and very long. It help our morale plenty. Before the weather confined us to the dreary cold billets - and 14 men can get pretty sick of looking at each other. Now we can go biking along good road until 10 or 10:30 without a light. It is so full and good exercise
Don.
